Nation Must Stay In World Affairs To Avert Another War, Senator Says

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Only free discussion and honest atttempts at corrective measures will open and heal festering sores in relations between this country and its allies, Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine told reporters yesterday after the second secret session of the Senate to hear reports from five glob-girdling members.

Brewster's comment came after a session opened with acrimonious discussion of news leaks from Thursday's meeting, in which Democratic Leader Barkley and Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, warned against making public the proceedings of a closed session. Attention was called to the Senate rule providing for expulsion for divulging information given in executive session.

Agree on Need for Cooperation

The Maine Republican made it clear that despite criticisms of Great Britain on petroleum, air base deals and communications monopolies and of Russia on the question of Siberian bases, all widely published, the five Senators came back more convinced than ever of the necessity of United States cooperation in the postwar world.

"We are in the game to stay," Brewster said, "and we can't just pick up our marbles and run home when the war is over. We tried that once and if we try it again I am convinced that we will have an even more catastrophic war than this in another 25 years."

Criticisms, however, were leveled at least as much at some of America's own civilian war activities as at the United States allies.

Truman Report Due Soon

Brewster told the press that the War Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, would shortly issue reports of its findings on the foreign activities of the Office of War Information.

He said that in the face of these reports the President's last request for an added appropriation of five million dollars for overseas OWI work would face sharp scrutiny.

Brewster mentioned especially the work of OWI in picturing life in America to the people of India.

"It is not clear how this account of America's food, its people, its children, its dress can contribute to our war effort," Brewster said, "although it might contribute to a revolution in India."

He mentioned the fact that the United States had taken Russia to task for propagandizing its way of life here and asked why the United States should take this

General Barrett of Alexandria Killed in South Pacific Area

Maj. Gen. Charles Dodson Barrett, 58, of the Marine Corps, has been killed accidently somewhere in the South Pacific, it was officially reported by the Navy Department yesterday. No details as to how the accident occurred were given.

General Barrett, who made his home at 213 Pitt st., Alexandria, Va., had been in the South Pacific theater for the past year, members of his family reported. He is the father of Capt. Charles D. Barrett, jr., also a Marine, who returned to this country a short time ago to be decorated for gallantry on Guadalcanal.

He was the son of the late Dr. Robert South Barrett, sr., who was dean of the Episcopal Cathedral at Atlanta, Ga., and of Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, who, with Charles N. Crittenton, founded the Florence Crittenton Mission.

In addition to her activities with the Mission, of which she was the national head for many years, General Barrett's mother also was Virginia State president of the Daughters of the American Revolution for eight years and was second national vice president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

General Barrett's sister, Mrs. Rathbone Smith of 408 Duke st., Alexandria, is now general superintendent of the Florence Crittenton Mission in Alexandria.

General Barrett was born in Henderson, Ky., in 1885 and moved to Alexandria shortly thereafter.

Fifth Army Now Only 100 Miles From Rome; British Advance

Allied Headquarters, Algiers Oct. 8.—Advancing 10 miles through rain and mud, the American Fifth Army has captured the important communications and air center of Capua, less than 100 airline miles from Rome, and has reached the swollen Volturno River to face the Germans on a 16-mile front from Capua to the sea, headquarters announced today.

Nazi defense lines south of the Volturno, weakened by the withdrawal of the famous 16th armored division to oppose the British Eighth Army on the Adriatic end of the front, collapsed suddenly yesterday and the American and British troops of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark surged through to the south banks of the stream.

Capua, Castel Volturno at the river's mouth, and all the towns between them and Naples fell before the Allied punch, which wiped out strong German pockets of resistance left behind on the south bank. There appeared scant likelihood that the river itself could long hold up the Allied advance or that the Nazis had been able to convert the north bank into a fortified line capable of halting the Allied troops.

Capua on Appian Way

Inland from Capua the Germans at last report still held a dwindling foothold below the Volturno, but they were being rapidly cleaned out and any enemy forces remaining in that sector appeared doomed to annihilation.

There was no immediate information whether the Fifth Army was able to capture any bridges over the Volturno before they could be dynamited by the fleeing enemy. Among the small towns taken in yesterday's sweep were Villa Literno, Marcianise, Casal di Principe and Trentola.

Capua, ancient Roman city that was famous for its training school for gladiators, stands at the original eastern terminus of the Appian Way to Rome. Two modern highways now connect it with the Italian capital, one following the old Appian route along the coast to Terracina and the other swinging inland. It is 110 miles from Rome by rail.

Nazis Throw In Tanks, Planes, Guns Against Driving Soviets

James M. Long

London (Saturday), Oct. 9.—Russia's "battle of the bridgeheads" rose toward a climax today as Soviet spearheads battered back German counterattacks and fanned out in the three pockets built on the west bank of the Dnieper River, Moscow announced. More than 2800 Germans fell in the struggles which "assumed a very fierce character."

Reinforced German units, battling frantically to stem the Soviet menace to Kiev and the entire eastern defense line, hurled tanks, planes and men against the Soviet lines.

The Moscow communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, said the Russians repulsed the German thrusts and disabled or burned 24 tanks and eight self-propelled guns. Soviet airmen covering vulnerable Russian communication lines brought down 32 German planes in air combats.

Moscow dispatches suggested the Germans finally were turning to make an all-out stand for the Dnieper as they abandoned their retreat and "elastic defense."

The Germans admitted "marked accentuation" of Russian attempts to widen their cross-river footholds north and south of Kiev and near Kremenchug and reported Soviet attempts to establish new ones.

Major battles also raged in the north, where 3400 Germans were declared to have fallen before the Soviet drives aimed at Vitebsk and the Latvian border. In the extreme south the last suicide rearguard of Germans was falling as the Red army cleaned up the final German foothold in the Caucasus.

The Germans fought viciously before Vitebsk, falling back to defense posts organized in expectation of retreat. But Moscow said the Russians routed them out and in one large populated place annihilated the entire German garrison after day-long fighting. Prisoners and war material were captured and 400 German dead lay on the battlefield.

33 U. S. Planes Lost

Forts and Liberators Bag 130 German Craft, Escorts Get 22

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 9.—One hundred and forty-two enemy fighters were shot out of the sky yesterday as one of the largest American heavy bombers forces ever to penetrate Germany pounded the big Nazi Stuka dive-bomber plant at Bremen and smashed at Vegesack, a few miles to the northwest.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators destroyed 130 of the fighters, while P-47 Thunderbolts, which escorted the bombers half way to the targets, ripped the other 12 out of the sky. Earlier yesterday, short-range Allied planes shot down 10 other German fighters.

Thirty American bombers and three fighters were reported missing, a U. S. Army communique said.

The heavy American daylight blow followed powerful RAF attacks on Stuttgart, Friedrichshafen and Munich Thursday night and there were indications that British bombers again were hitting Germany early today in the swelling non-stop aerial offensive. An alert in Bern, Switzerland, suggested that southern Germany might be the target.

While Fortress and Liberator bombardiers were dropping their deadly cargoes on an aircraft factory and shipbuilding yards at Bremen, and submarine installations at Vegesack, the gunners on the bombers shot down 130 enemy fighters, a U. S. Army communikue announced.

American long-range Thunderbolt fighter pilots who accompanied the bombers into northwestern Germany ripped 12 more German fighters from the sky.

The Germans themselves attested to the weight of the American attack on Bremen when the Nazi agency DNB quickly reported "particularly heavy destruction" in the center of Bremen with casualties to the population as a result of the "terror raid."

Two Destroyers And Cruiser Sent to Bottom In Vella Gulf

American warships sank one Japanese cruiser and two destroyers and damaged two other destroyers in Vella Gulf of the Solomons, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique announced today, shortly after the Tokyo radio said that a United States naval task force had attacked Wake Island for the second time in three days.

Taking advantage of a half-moon in the Solomons the American warships maneuvered into firing line and slammed home their shells with such deadly accuracy that two other groups of Japanese naval vessels to the rear, which had attempted to evacuate the Allied-menaced garrison on Kolombangara, elected to turn tail and run.

American losses were "moderate," the communique said.

Troops May Have Landed

Regarding the Wake assault, the broadcast, heard by the National Broadcasting Co., was interpreted by the International News Service as indicating that some American troops may have landed, because the Nipponese announcer reported that it was repelled by Japanese army forces along with naval units. The blow might have been a heavy air raid, however, and Jap army units likely used antiaircraft batteries. There was no word from American sources.

Earlier, the same Tokyo broadcast, quoting Japanese imperial headquarters, asserted that "a powerful enemy force carried out aerial and ship bombardments" for two days. The American announcement of the attack described it as "commencing" at dawn, but did not state whether it was a prolonged assault or a lightning raid.

In the Solomons, shellfire caused the enemy light cruiser and one destroyer to explode. A torpedo sent another destroyer down, adding to Japanese warships losses in that area which now approximate 25 since the new Allied drive opened June 30, against New Georgia.

The enemy warships apparently were trying to rescue troops now pulling out of Kolombangara on the south side of the Vella Gulf.

A spokesman said, according to the Associated Press, that the force was intercepted on the way down to Kolombangara.

Three Elements

The warship force consisted of three elements. One was the spearhead group, which was severely mauled. The secondary units probably were destroyers and the rearguard section probably landing barges for evacuation of the troops.

The last two groups fled as sheets of flame from the American warships ripped into the calm night.

General MacArthur's spokesman offered no comment on the size of Admiral William F. Halsey's force.

The communique did not specify the battle scene but MacArthur's spokesman said it was northwest of Vella Lavella. That is in an area bounded to the northwest by Bougainville, Japan's last big holding in the Solomons, and to the northeast by Choiseul.

Japs in Tough Spot

Japanese evacuation of Kolombangara, necessitated by the presence of American forces on Vella Lavella to the north and New Georgia to the south, at first was attempted by barges. Allied planes sank many of these.

Some managed to reach Choiseul Island. At South Pacific headquarters of Admiral William F. Halsey, a spokesman pointed out this week the Japanese would be forced to risk some warships in getting their men off Choiseul on the retreat to Bougainville and off Kolombangara's north shore or else abandon them to their doom.

'Guiding Principles' Offered for Possible 10-Billion-Dollar Bank

By Donald Kovacic
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Treasury disclosed last night that its monetary experts have drafted "guiding principles" for a possible 10 billion dollar United Nations bank to help finance postwar reconstruction and development.

Bearing some resemblance to this country's depression-born Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the bank would "encourage private financial agencies to provide long-term capital for the sound development of the productive resources of member countries and when necessary cooperate with and supplement private capital for such purposes."

The general idea was outlined by Secretary Morgenthau earlier this week before executive sessions of several Senate and House committees. It was intended to keep the draft a closely-guarded secret until it could be submitted to foreign governments, but disclosures in London papers of a purported Treasury document on the subject led the department to release copies of the draft.

A strong movement developed in the House yesterday to further increase benefits to service dependents, as the House Rules Committee sped legislation lifting payments generally to service children and other armed force dependents.

A scramble to match more liberal Senate allowances, and even raise the rates for wives as well as children, appeared in prospect when the bill goes before the House Wednesday.

This would be possible under Rules Committee procedure approved yesterday opening the dependents' benefits bill to amendments. Leaders conceded the liberalization drive would be hard to beat but hoped to hold payments "within reason."

White House Attacks Problem Of Postwar Demobilization

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A two-pronged attack on problems of postwar demobilization designed to set up governmental machinery to manage this Nation's eventual return to a peacetime economy has been launched by the White House on instructions from President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday.

To work out a "unified and comprehensive" program for the handling of veterans discharged from the armed services, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes has called a meeting of the heads of the large number of Government agencies having interests in the field for next week. Monday afternoon has been set as a tentative date for the meeting.

Other White House advisers, including former Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, have been engaged in doing spadework which is expected to lead to the establishment of a committee or Government agency entrusted with responsibility for industrial phases of demobilization.

A request to Congress for legislation on some phases of the demobilization problem is considered a likely result of present discussions in the executive branch.

It is understood that the Administration is approaching the problem gingerly for fear the action will be mininterpreted as indicating that the war is about over. However, a patchwork quilt of postwar planning is developing within the Government, with some agencies overlapping or coming into conflict with the work of other agencies.

In its present disorganized and undirected state, it is believed that considerably more demobilization planning is being done than would be required if central direction under an established program were provided.

In some Government quarters, it is believed that the lack of a well-defined Government policy on such questions as reemployment, use of war plant facilities, termination of war contracts, is impeding the war effort by creating uncertainty and so-called "peace jitters."

It is also believed that a well-established program to provide jobs for veterans would be valuable in maintaining troop morale.

President Roosevelt made public a general six-point program covering the question of demobilization of war veterans late in July. The now-defunct National Resources Planning Board, in a comprehensive report on the subject, urged the establishment of a central agency to handle the readjustment of both warworkers and servicemen to productive jobs.

It is understood that representatives from the War Manpower Commission, Federal Security Agency, Veterans Administration, Labor Department, and other agencies have been invited to Byrnes' conference.

At present, the veterans' demobilization job is divided up as fol-

Allied Invasion Of Greek Coast Isles Reported

Unconfirmed Turkish Dispatch Has British In Cyclades Group

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Oct. 8.—The struggle for the Aegean Islands shaped up tonight into what may unfold as a concerted Allied drive to sweep German troops from the Greek Peninsula and force the Balkan back door to Germany.

The British disclosed today that the Dodecanese Island of Simi had been occupied by Allied forces and this emphasized the Allied threat to Rhodes and Crete, largest German Mediterranean island fortresses.

The disclosure was made in an announcement that German seaborne forces had failed in an attempt to take the island from its British garrison.

At the same time, an unconfirmed Turkish report said that other British forces had invaded the Cyclades Islands, in the Greek archipelago.

British Setback on Cos

While the British appeared to have suffered one setback in the island advance—no reference was made today to Cos, Dodecanese base which the Germans claim to have retaken and which the British admitted yesterday had been penetrated by Nazi forces—the Nazi success was seen as a desperate attempt to seal off the Aegean with forces they can ill afford to spare.

German planes have struck back also at Lero, another Dodecanese island occupied by the British, and at Samos, Greek island to the Fire on Dalmatian Coast in Support of Yugoslav Patriots

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 8.—Italian warships are shelling German-occupied towns on the Dalmatian coast in support of Yugoslav patriots, the Bari (Italy) radio said tonight in a broadcast heard by the London Daily Express.

This was the first report of any action by Italian naval units since Italy capitulated, although King Vittorio Emanuele said in a speech last Saturday that Italian warships were once again sailing "the seas of the fatherland" under their own colors.

The Algiers radio said the Yugoslavs themselves were using small warships put at their disposal by the Italians.

German attempts to storm the Adriatic islands of Zari and Hvar were revealed in a Cairo announcement with a Free Yugoslav radio statement that American and British officers had conferred with Yugoslav guerilla leaders at Partisan headquarters.

This renewed Adriatic activity and Allied participation, along with a fresh Allied victory in the Aegean resulting from a German attempt to wrest control of the Dodecanese island of Simi from the British, fitted into a picture of a coordinated Allied attack on the Balkans rather than isolated actions.

Yugoslav reports of the German attacks on Zari and Hvar, the former off the Dalmatian coast and the latter south of Split, said they

Hamburg Fire Stripped Air Of Oxygen, Left 20,000 Dead

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 8.—The Allied bombing of Hamburg which leveled that German port in early August was described today as a holocaust in which men, women and children fought against fire for the oxygen of the air with fire winning the battle as the flames soared to a height of 6 kilometers (3.7 miles).

The Swiss newspaper Allgemeine Volkszeitung said that almost no one escaped in the heavily populated area of many square kilometers on which the Allied planes planted a "carpet" of hundreds of thousands of explosive and incendiary bombs.

A phenomenon resulted in which the fire drew the oxygen from the surrounding air, forming a constantly increasing "air chimney" in which the flames mounted higher and higher, increasing in violence and finally forming a compact roof of fire, the newspaper said.

This phenomenon was said to have developed to such an extent at Hamburg that the movement of the air was comparable to a typhoon—a gigantic forge pumping air from all directions and the streets serving as conduits with flames rushing through them to meet the offered oxygen.

The fire, the newspaper said, consumed the last bit of oxygen in cellars and finally exhausted that in air-raid shelters, which at the same time were subjected to unbearable heat.

Hamburg authorities said only a minute percentage of the population that braved the bombs to flee when the attack started, escaped. A few minutes later the attacked area was encircled by fire, from which not even the widest streets and public squares could afford refuge.

Those who remained in the shelters—where at least 20,000 persons perished—were reduced to ashes.

Hitler, Nazi Chiefs Hold 'Pep' Session

Fuehrer Warns Nation Against Becoming Discouraged; War Can Be Lost, He Implies

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 8.—Adolf Hitler, attempting to bolster morale on the German home front, assembled Nazi Party chiefs and military and home front leaders at his headquarters Thursday and told them the German people must not be discouraged by reverses, the Berlin radio disclosed officially tonight.

Hitler mentioned the possibility of defeat, and the theme of his talk seemed to be: "Germany will win, if—"

"The (Nazi) Party's struggle for power set an example for today's struggle of destiny by the German people," Hitler said. "The party never allowed itself to be discouraged by setbacks."

"Arms alone mean nothing," he said, "if not backed up by the will of men."

Points to Party as Inspiration

The Nazi Party's "firm determination and utmost preparedness to help" are inspiring the people today, Hitler was quoted as saying, "especially under the hard conditions of the air war."

"The Fuehrer then continued," said Berlin's official broadcast, "that if the German people keep up this spirit, which has stood the test on the battlefields as well as at home, the war can never be lost and must and will bring a great German victory."

Hitler was quoted directly as having concluded his address in this way:

"Take along with you in your hearts the unshakable belief that if our determination does not swerve, this war will end with a great German victory."

At another point in his address, in which he gave what Berlin described as "a comprehensive survey of the military situation," Hitler declared:

"We shall go on fighting and not get tired until our aim is reached."

Any other remarks Hitler may have made on the subject of possible defeat and German morale were left to the imagination of the outside world. Berlin's account of the meeting was unusually brief, considering the importance of the subject and the rank of the leaders assembled.

May Have Been War Council

These included Gestapo Chief and Home Minister Heinrich Himmler; admiral of the fleet and commander of the German navy, Karl Doenitz; Minister for War Production Albert Speer, and Field Marshal General Erhard Milch, general inspector of the German air force.

While the meeting, from Berlin's account, obviously was in the nature of a pep rally, it also may have been a kind of war council at which the Nazi leaders sized up the current war situation, which finds German armies retreating in Russia and Italy, spread thin over the rebellious Balkans and on guard against imminent attack in the West.

The home front whose spirits Hitler tried to raise is under a pummeling Allied air attack, bringing the "especially hard conditions" which Hitler mentioned.

The other leaders also addressed the meeting. As the Berlin radio summarized their remarks, Himmler reminded that "the war morale of the German nation after four years of war is excellent, and there exists no defeatism in Germany."

British Reported In Cyclades Isles

north, also held by the Allies.

(The Berlin radio said today that German forces "occupying Cos" had taken more than 880 British prisoners and more than 3000 "Italian Badoglio troops.")

Although the British announcement gave no indication of the size of the German force which attempted the Simi landing, the significance of the thrust lay in the island's proximity to German-held Rhodes. It lies only about 15 miles north of Rhodes and within 150 miles of Crete.

3000 Cretans Shot

Indications that the Nazis expect an Allied advance on Greece were seen in reports of renewed activity by the Gestapo, both on Crete and the mainland.

Five hundred Crete islanders have been shot, almost 1000 others are being held as hostages, and 7 villages have been razed following a skirmish between German troops and the Cretans, reports reaching here said.

Any Allied invasion of the Greek mainland could perhaps count also on the support of thousands of Italian troops reported to have rallied to the cause of the Greek guerillas following the Italian armistice. They have light arms and machine guns with them, the reports said.

One traveler who left the Greek mainland in early September said the Germans were strained to the utmost even then to maintain forces at all points where revolt threatened.

He said the food situation had grown worse, but that guerilla bands were greatly heartened over the Allied operations in the Dodecanese.

Tours Island

De Gaulle Cheered by Corsicans

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ajaccio, Corsica, Oct. 8.—Standing in the shadow of the Napoleon Bonaparte Memorial, Gen. Charles de Gaulle today told 3000 cheering Corsicans that France would be freed as was Corsica, and that "all must give way to the Cross of Lorraine."

The Fighting French leader's speech in a square newly named "De Gaulle Square," which shelters Napoleon's memorial, climaxed a rapid two-day tour of the war-battered island, during which he was greeted tumultuously everywhere.

Hailed as a Symbol

There is no doubt of de Gaulle's popularity on this island, but this popularity is not attached to any political significance. He was hailed as a symbol of French resistance only.

This city is the Communist stronghold of Corsica, and parts of his speech which drew the heaviest applause referred to Russia.

Outside this city, however, Catholics and left wing groups not affiliated with the Communists, hold power. That rival Corsicans who united to fight with the French already had split along traditional clan lines was seen in a pro-De Gaulle sermon by the Catholic archbishop just before De Gaulle's speech. The archbishop urged the partisans to forget their private feuds and "not lose sight of the fact that the Germans are our first enemy."

A Strange Situation

The French fighting the Germans on this island present a strange situation. Many wear the Cross of Lorraine. Most of the top army officers are Giraudists. Others wear emblems of various patriotic groups. The town is plastered with pictures of De Gaulle and Giraud. But on the ships which bring soldiers here the French navy still has flag-bedecked pictures of Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan.

The day's biggest laugh from the Corsicans came when De Gaulle made a reference to Italy. The merriment rippled through the crowd, much to the discomfort of two or three dozen Italian soldiers who stood around the fringes of the crowd—fully armed.

atic repelled more fierce counter-attacks by German tanks, including 60-ton Tigers, took the offensive and occupied an important high area above Termoli, a headquarters announcement said.

Six German divisions were reported engaged in resisting the Allies along the twisting 110-mile front across the Italian waist. Nazi divisions so far identified in the fierce fighting were the 16th armored division, which was wiped out at Stalingrad and later reconstituted; the Hermann Goering, 26th and 29th armored divisions, the 15th armored grenadiers and a parachute division.

In throwing the cream of their armored divisions against Montgomery's forces the Nazis were making a desperate effort to stem this "side door" threat to Rome. The British Eighth Army, aided by seaborne landings and supported by the fire of destroyers, has reached a point approximately 130 miles east and slightly north of the capital.

The battle line now runs from the mouth of the Volturno to Capua, southeast to Maddaloni, northeast to Benevento where it crosses the Calore River to Montecalvo, and from there northeastward to the Adriatic just north of Termoli.

(A Canadian press dispatch reported that Canadian troops with the Eighth Army under General Montgomery had mounted positions dominating a strategic valley in the Termoli area on the Adriatic coast. It described the fire from German artillery and mortar batteries as the heaviest the Canadians had encountered since they began their northward push a week ago.)

In the mountainous central area of the front Allied forces were reported pushing the Germans steadily back. An Allied communique said the Fifth Army had made steady progress in repairing communications destroyed by the withdrawing Nazis and by Allied air attack.

Bad weather curtailed the American and British bomber offensive against German-held positions yesterday, but fighter-bombers managed to fly through the clouds to strafe roads behind the enemy lines, destroying 11 vehicles and damaging others. Among their targets was a big Tiger tank.

RAF Spitfires patrolling the Termoli area, where the enemy appeared to have concentrated his meager air strength to support counterattacks against the British and Canadians, shot down four Messerschmitt 109s during the day and destroyed a Junkers 88 bomber last night. Four Allied craft were lost.

A checkup showed that American Flying Fortresses which battered the rail junction of Mestre near Venice on Wednesday shot down 13 German fighters, approximately half the enemy force that tried to beat off the raid.

were beaten off by Yugoslav Partisans.

London viewed the presence of American and British officers at Yugoslav conferences as an indication of how highly the Allies regard Partisan activities that have resulted in half a dozen successes on the mainland.

The Yugoslav night communique said Patriot forces had captured the towns of Livno, Kupres, Varasdinske-Toplice on the railway line from Zagreb to Varasdin, and Ludbreg, on the railway line from Varasdin to the Hungarian border.

In the capture of Tusla, on October 1, the war bulletin said, the patriots took 2147 prisoners, killed 500 Germans, wounded 400 and took large supplies of war material.

Czech Landing Doubted

London, however, was inclined to doubt earlier reports that Allied-trained Czech troops had been landed in Yugoslavia, and a Yugoslav spokesman said he doubted such a landing would be taken by Gen. Draja Mihailovic as a signal to open up with his 120,000 guerillas. The brunt of the guerilla fighting thus far has been credited to the forces of Josip Broz, the "Tito" of the Partisan bands.

A Swiss radio report said all Slovene railroads linking Austria and Italy had been cut and that rail lines from Trieste had been destroyed.

By holding Livno and Kupres, the Partisan forces have cut off German forces in Split from their bases at Banja Luka and Sarajevo. The Yugoslavs in Tusla, perched on the last range of hills above the plain formed by the juncture of the Drin and Sava Rivers command the approach to Belgrade.

Nazi Grab of Rule In All France Seen

Sweden Hears

Reds' Terms Crimp Nazi Peace Feeler

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Oct. 8.—New reports of German peace overtures were circulated today and the Stockholm newspaper Social-Demokraten said it had learned that efforts of some Nazis to discuss an armistice with Russia collapsed when the Soviets demanded the custody of Adolf Hitler and the withdrawal of the German army behind the old German frontiers.

The reports, which must be viewed with reservation, were attributed by the newspaper to information given by a high German military official to military men in one of Germany's satellites. The report added that Nazi emissaries now are making attempts to contact the United States and Britain through Madrid and Lisbon.

Significantly, the new peace rumors came amid preparations for a tripower conference and the possibility that they were planted by German propaganda must be taken into consideration in the light of repeated Nazi efforts to split the unity of Russia, Britain and the United States.

(NBC Reporter David Anderson said in a broadcast from Stockholm that there were indications that the new rumors of German peace overtures to America, Russia and England "represent more than just a propaganda plant.")

The account as given by the Social-Demokraten was that Germany asked Russia, through Japan, for an armistice. Russia replied that the German armies must withdraw behind the old German frontiers and Hitler must be surrendered before any discussions could be started.

The Nazis countered only with an offer to retreat to the von Ribbentrop Line, established after the attack on Poland. Russia refused to listen to such a proposal.

It was noteworthy that all the peace talk buzzing about Europe has revolved about a separate peace which would lift the strain of multiple front warfare and give the hard-pressed Nazi armies more freedom to follow Hitler's original policy of "divide and conquer."

Breach Between Germans and Laval Is Reported

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 8.—The Germans are preparing to take over the whole government of France, wiping out any pretense of Vichy home rule, both Axis and Allied reports indicated tonight as the Nazis strove to meet mounting resistance with wholesale arrests throughout the country.

Robert de Beauplan, Nazi mouthpiece on the Paris radio, admitted a wave of sabotage in France and asserted the Germans would take over if French authorities are unable to cope with "terrorism."

A few hours later, Radio France, the Free French station at Algiers said, the Nazis already had laid plans to seize the government and that they would be put into effect "any day now."

For weeks it has been reported in neutral capitals that the Nazis were far from satisfied with Pierre Laval and there have even been reports that Laval himself was trying to drop his role of Quisling.

The Moscow radio, quoting a Tass dispatch from Geneva, said tonight the Germans had appointed Gestapo agents as Laval's bodyguard and that he was regarded as a "Gestapo prisoner."

The French station in Algiers, quoting a foreign diplomat who had just arrived in North Africa from Vichy, said, a "network of De Gaullist officials have been discovered in the Ministry of Interior, the Foreign Ministry and in the French Ministry of Information in France."

The Zurich correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter, quoting a foreign diplomat, said the Germans were making "mass arrests" in the Vichy government preparatory to taking over the administration.

Nazi spokesman De Beauplan tried to frighten the French into letting up in their sabotage of German machinery with threats that severe German measures would be taken.

"What goes beyond the imagination," De Beauplan said, "is that peaceful and decent Frenchmen should be filled with glee at every report of a new act of sabotage."

captured Nevel, 70 miles from the Latvian border and 60 miles north of Vitebsk, the Russians killed more than 3600 Germans and took 600 prisoners in two days.

Major Operation

"The enemy tries in every possible way to stem the advance of our troops but suffers failures," the communique said.

[Stockholm dispatches, quoted by the International News Service, said the Red spearheads that took Nevel have pushed to within 10 miles of the Latvian border. There was no Allied confirmation of the report that the Soviet armies had advanced that fast.]

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German radio commentator, called the Nevel attack "a major operation" and said the Germans "are continuing to throw fresh reserves into this fighting sector which has become the focal point of the battle."

In the south the Germans were taking to barges in the retreat back across the Kerch Strait from the Caucasus to the Crimea. Five more barges loaded with German infantry were sunk and 16 of the planes protecting them brought down, the bulletin said, and six of the strongponits protecting the retreat fell to the Russians as their defenders died or surrendered.

The Caucasus bridgehead clean-up was led by Gen. Ivan Petrov, who had a personal interest in seeing the drive carry across the strait. It was Petrov who led the defense of Sevastopol, Crimean naval base, before it fell a little more than a year ago.

The Crimea also was menaced from the top by the Russian crossings of the Dnieper.

The Germans sounded their own death knell for the Caucasus position in Sertorius' statement that "German detaching movements are about to be completed."

"They were carried out in the last few weeks with such success that . . . not a single German gun fell into enemy hands intact," he said.

The fight for the Dnieper bridgeheads outweighed the battles in other areas of the long Soviet front in the strategic gains which would come with victory. Not only would Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, be outflanked, but the Germans probably would be forced back from Leningrad to the Crimea, abandoning still more important territory.

A Moscow broadcast said the fighting on the west bank "does not slacken in intensity day or night" and a BBC broadcast said the Russians had pushed tanks across the river and sent them into action.

Details on the night crossing by boats, barges and rafts with the aid of guerillas who led the Red army through secret paths in the marshes were revealed by Moscow dispatches.

The guerillas went into action as soon as the first Soviet columns approached the river. They attacked the last German holding forces from the rear on the east bank and led the Russians through the swamps to cut off the Germans. The guerillas simultaneously captured all the boats with which the Germans planned to retreat to the west bank and produced additional craft from hiding places.

Then they reported favorable conditions on the west bank and an immediate crossing was planned. Led through the swamp paths known only to long-time residents of the area, the Soviet soldiers climbed aboard the boats in the dark and successfully crossed the mile-wide stream, completing the operation before dawn. Antitank and field guns were shipped across later under a protective barrage from the east bank.

streaked to their home bases in the late afternoon, a great force of medium bombers escorted by many squadrons of fighters swept across the Straits of Dover towards the continent to continue the great Allied bomb barrage.

Shortly after dark London had a brief alert—its third in a row—but the all clear signal sounded without gunfire or bomb explosions having been heard in downtown London. At the same time the Berlin and other continental radio stations went off the air, indicating the approach of Allied planes.

While the heavy Fortresses were blasting Bremen, lighter Allied fighters in offensive operations over the continent were reported to have shot down ten enemy aircraft.

Two Allied planes were lost, but the pilot of one was reported to be safe.

While Londoners were taking a comparatively weak assault by Nazi planes last night, RAF planes delivered a major blow on the big motor and electrical plants at Stuttgart and the Germans acknowledged extensive damage to the city. It was the 15th raid of the war on Stuttgart.

Propagandists Busy

German propagandists made much of the attack on London but the British said only 15 of 60 raiders reached the city and dropped only 30 tons of bombs. The British denied earlier reports that it was the heaviest raid of the year on the capital, saying that on three occasions the Nazis have launched stronger assaults this year. Some casualties and property damage was reported.

The American bag of German fighters was one of the largest since the Regensburg and Schweinfurt raids of August 17 when 307 were destroyed. The last large batch shot down was on September 27 when Fortresses and Thunderbolts got 57 in assaults on Emden and the nearby city of Aurich.

tack in the territory of a friendly ally.

Brewster hewed closely to the line in refusing information given in executive session, but some of his afternoon's statements in the closed session became known.

They included:

1. Charges that lend-lease shipments are being mismanaged, with 30,000 trucks a year being shipped to Australia for civilian purposes, while only 15,000 new ones are retained in the United States.

2. Charges that our own civilian agencies are shipping goods wastefully around the world, even without request. The United States has shipped large quantities of gasoline and oil to South Pacific islands which don't need it, he said. He told of baffled islanders trying to give away Ford trucks for which they had no use, and of tires which wouldn't fit any vehicle for which they were sent being stored to rot in old sheds.

To rumors that he had challenged estimates given by his fellow traveler, Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, in executive session Thursday, that one million casualties might be saved the United States if Russia gave this country Siberian bases to press the Japanese war, Brewster last night issued a vigorous denial.

First speaker of the afternoon was Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky, who told his colleagues:

1. All aid must be rushed to China to hold United States bases there in the face of reports that the Japanese are massing in Indo-China.

2. The Chinese are weak because of lack of fire-power and the British have shown no desire for a strong China.

3. The Pacific War must be pressed and General MacArthur must be given more aid. The Germans are already on their knees and the Allies can afford to let them simmer, but the Japanese are growing stronger and more formidable all the time.

3 Jap Ships Sunk; Wake Again Attacked

Ramu Valley have reached a point within 25 air miles of Bogadjim, the defense outpost for the Japanese coastal base of Madang. That would place the patrols 45 miles south of their objective, Madang, the next enemy base up the New Guinea coast from recently captured Finschhafen.

This appearance of the Japanese navy units in the Solomons was the first in several weeks.

In the same gulf in early August, a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers were sunk and a third destroyer was believed sunk in a battle with American Navy units. In July, United States bombing planes sent two destroyers to the gulf's bottom and caused other enemy naval units, including three cruisers, six destroyers and two transports, to turn and flee north.

The Japanese now have lost approximately 25 cruisers and destroyers in the Solomons since the Pacific offensive opened June 30.

A Timoshenko Always Hits A German Hard

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Oct. 8 (INS).—The Russo-German War had unexpected repercussions in a Sao Paulo industrial plant today when an employe with the honored Russian name of Timoshenko had a fist fight with his German foreman.

As might have been expected, Timoshenko won.

The Russian is Antonio Timoshenko, who claims to be a nephew of the Russian general. He got mad at his foreman, a German named Paul Jashl, when the two got to discussing the war. Jashl, badly mauled, was sent to a hospital. Timoshenko went to jail.

'World RFC' Plan Outlined By Treasury

stressed that the draft is not an official document. It merely represents, he told a press conference, the opinion of American experts and was laid before the congressional committees "to let them know what we have been thinking about."

White emphasized, too, that it had not yet been sent to nor discussed with representatives of any other country. He added that such discussions would be held, as in the case of the monetary stabilization program, to get views of other nations and "stimulate them to submit other proposals."

Each Would Contribute

The world bank plan is separate from the currency stabilization proposal. White said either could function separately, but there would be close cooperation between the two should both come into existence.

Under the proposal each country would contribute a share to the fund, "according to an appropriate formula." White said, however, that the formula has not been determined and that he could not estimate this country's share except that it would be "substantial."

Some Senators, after hearing Morgenthau on Tuesday, said they understood this country would contribute about $3,500,000,000 and Great Britain about one billion dollars, with other countries subscribing proportionate amounts. White, stressing that in planning the projected bank there was no desire to interfere with private capital, recalled losses by private investors after the last war and said it would not be easy to coax them into the foreign field again because of the "nipping" many took.

"If private capital were adequate, this bank wouldn't do any business," he declared.

Under the "guiding principles," the bank could guarantee loans made with private capital to any member government, and through the government to any of its political subdivisions and to business and industrial enterprises. The bank would make loans out of its own resources "only when the borrower is unable to secure the funds from private investment sources on reasonable terms."

Payable in Gold and Currency

Shares of the bank's capital would be payable in both gold and local currency. Member countries would make an initial payment of 20 per cent on their shares, and not more than 20 per cent additional could be called for in any one year.

Decisions of the bank would be based exclusively on economic considerations," the document states, adding:

"In passing upon any application to guarantee, participate in, or make a loan, the bank shall give consideration to the soundness of the investment project or program, to the budgetary position of the member government guaranteeing the loan and to the prospective balance of payments of the member country.

"All loans must fulfill the following general conditions: (a) payment of interest and principal must be fully guaranteed by the national government of the member country; (b) the investment project or program must have been investigated and approved by a competent committee; (c) the terms of the loan must be reasonable, and (d) on guaranteed loans the bank must be compensated for the risk it assumes.

"The bank will impose no conditions as to the member country in which the proceeds of a loan are to be spent."

White emphasized that the bank's purpose would be to provide long-term capital only and that its activities would not include either relief or rehabilitation, except where the rehabilitation would involve reconstruction.

Byrd Hears Civilian Roll Of Army Cut by 145,564

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

A total of 3200 civilian employes of the War Department in Washington and an additional 142,364 in the field were cut during the period from June 30 to August 31, Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson declared yesterday before a joint congressional committee on nonessential expenditures.

Chairman Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia asked Patterson if any were replaced by soldiers.

"Not a substantial number," the Undersecretary replied. "In general, WACS are being used to replace soldiers, rather than civilian employes."

Goal of the Byrd group is a reduction of at least 10 per cent in the total Government civilian payroll of 3 million men and women.

The Undersecretary indicated that the number of fathers called for Army service may grow as he asserted: "It should be emphasized that the Army of 7.7 million by December 31 is the minimum . . . It may have to be increased."

Patterson also told the economy committee that the War Department had an unexpended balance on August 31 of $118,909,000,000, of which 64 billion had not been obligated for expenditure under contracts.

Queried concerning the number of soldiers engaged in desk jobs, Patterson declared that it would be impossible to compute because every company of troops has its own clerk. The Senator suggested that the number doing clerical jobs in Washington could be presented, and Patterson replied that he would obtain the figure in the near future.

Transfer of Activities

"Part of the reduction is attributable to a transfer of certain activities of the War Department to private industry," Patterson asserted. "Some time ago the technical services embarked on a program to transfer management and operation of certain plants and depots, previously operated by the War Department, to private industry.

"This change in procedure was adopted to increase efficiency of the service. When such operation is transferred by granting it to a private contractor, some of the employes previously on Government payrolls become the employes of the contractor. A recent reduction in civilian personnel of 8950 has occurred as the result of such transfers."

Ratio of 1 to 5

Senator Byrd pointed out that the ratio of clerical workers to total personnel in the Navy is 1 to 5.

"What this committee is disturbed about is that half of the War Department's personnel is clerical," he said. The figure was based on a report earlier in the hearing by Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, who had compiled figures showing that about 40 per cent of War Department civilian workers were clerical.

"It is General Marshall's urgent desire that at no time shall there be one man in uniform whose services are not required," Patterson told the committee. "When the War Department's estimates for the fiscal year 1944 were presented for consideration by the Congress, an Army of 7.5 million enlisted men and 720,000 officers, or a total of 8.2 million individuals was indicated.

Strength of Army

"Changes of a strategic character, together with increased commitments to Allied nations for military equipment, have caused the chief of staff to postpone the activation of some units to a point where, instead of mustering an Army of 8.2 million by the end of this calendar year, he will call for 7.7 million.

"This has been done without prejudice to his authority to raise the Army to 8.2 million if the situation demands. It should be emphasized that the Army of 7.7 million by December 31 is the minimum which the chief of staff states is required to carry out the planned military operations. It may have to be increased. The decision as to whether or not it will have to be increased cannot be made at this time. However, the War Department has been and will continue to be on the alert to effect all possible economy in manpower and funds."

More Liberal Dependent Benefits Gain

Clason (Republican) of Massachusetts, said he will revive the Senate draft bill amendment, allowing $80 for a service wife with one child and $20 more for each additional child.

2. Representative George G. Sadowski (Democrat) of Michigan, said he will ask $55 for the service wife (whose $50 allowance under present law is continued by the House and Senate bills); plus $35 additional for the first child and $30 more for each additional child.

The bill reported Thursday by the Military Committee and cleared yesterday by the Rules Committee, provides $50 for a childless wife (same as present law); $75 for a wife with one child (now $62); $95 for a wife with two children (now $72); and $15 more for each additional child, now $10). Dependents of enlisted of the upper three grades for the first time would be eligible for family allowances.

The committe report said: "Too generous allowances for wives without children might serve to deter many, who are able, from direct participation in the war effort. Furthermore, many wives make desired readjustments in regard to living arrangements during the time their husbands are in service."

Sadowski said that failed to recognize the fact that most wives with children, who likewise would receive the basic $50, are unable now to take jobs because they must care for their children, and "a dollar a day is small enough allowance to do it."

The pay bill was shot out ahead, to clear the path for easy passage of the Senate-passed fathers' draft bill. The House Military Committee slated closed hearings on the latter measure for Tuesday. Meanwhile, in its benefits bill report to the House the committee criticized Selective Service inductions of fathers without regard to dependency, and use of the Selective Service law to force men with families into war jobs.

"Your committee disapproves, with emphasis," said the report, "of what appears to be an effort on the part of those charged with the administration of Selective Service to use that law, designed as a military measure only, to force men of families to leave one kind of employment to engage in another and different employment.

"This, within itself, amounts to willful perversion of the purpose, spirit and intent of the law."

The report said dependency "is the fundamental principle underlying the statutory laws of this Government relating to induction." It said Congress intended dependency of women and children upon the husband for support "should be a matter for mature consideration and cautious action upon the part of those charged with administration of the Selective Service system from the local draft board all the way up to the national director."

The committee declared increased dependency allowances were made imperative by the Selective Service program "requiring the induction of fathers for military service.

and chairmen also participated in a "pep" meeting.

Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, chairman of District A, opened the instruction meeting for 280 workers of the Northwest section, who were told that the Community War Fund is "something constructive in a world that seems to be given over to destruction." Mrs. Marsh added, "It touches almost everybody in Washington."

"Every Washington address is a prospect," stated E. K. Morris, chairman of the Metropolitan Division, who presided. "The Community War Fund this year will be a truly community-wide enterprise."

Emphasizing the needs of local agencies supported by the fund, Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of WPB, told the war agency's volunteer workers that although the majority were not Washington natives, "Washington people are your people now.

Acting as cochairman at the WPB meeting were L. R. Boulware, deputy comptroller of shipbuilding, and Donald Nicholson, special assistant to the chairman of WPB.

More than 2500 Civil Service Commission employes assembled in the courtyard of the main building to hear appeals for funds for the three fronts which the Community War Fund assists this year.

Speakers were Francis P. Brassor, department chairman; Preston Delano, chairman of the Government division; Martin Agronsky, news and radio commentator; Lawson A. Moyer, executive director and chief examiner for the CSC, and three commissioners, Harry B. Mitchell, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan and Arthur S. Flemming.

Sabotage Charged As 1000 Hogs Die

Milwaukee, Oct. 8 (INS)—Sabotage of central Wisconsin swine herds was under investigation by the FBI tonight.

The plot was reported to the FBI by Della Loui, a Farm Magazine editor, who said more than 1000 hogs within a radius of 50 miles already have died of cholera, enteritis and a form of typhoid fever.

The diseases are spread, Loui said, by planting young diseased pigs in healthy herds.

Knox, Stark Visit U.S. Naval Task Forces

By John E. Lee
International News Service Staff Writer
Representing the Combined American Press

At a Northern British Naval Base, Oct. 8.—Braving a 60-mile gale and writhing seas, U. S. Navy Secretary Frank Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of American naval forces in the European theater, recently visited American naval task forces attached to Britain's home fleet. They found the men and ships eager for action and in fighting trim.

Foul weather which damaged the official party's small craft considerably curtailed the original program and forced cancellation of scheduled exercises at sea.

Knox and Stark visited this task force on September 20 and 21, but release of the news was withheld for security reasons until today.

Included in the official party were Capt. L. S. Perry, Knox's naval aide; Capt. L. P. Lovette, U. S. Navy director of public relations; Lieut (j. g.) Williams of Chicago, Ill., Stark's flag lieutenant, and Chief Warrant Officer H. L. Ashenfelter of Plainfield, N. J., Stark's chief ship's clerk.

Despite the weather, a destroyer collected the commanding officer of the task force and sped to pick up the official party.

Instead of going directly to the British flagship Duke of York, as planned, the party remained aboard the destroyer for a time waiting for the wind to abate.

Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, British commander in chief of the British Home Fleet, after two attempts by his sleek, powerful $40,000 barge, succeeded in boarding the destroyer for a brief call.

Later in the afternoon, after Fraser returned to his flagship, Knox, Perry and Lovette went aboard the Duke of York, where they were received with full honors.

Knox, suffering from a sore throat that made it almost impossible for him to speak, visited an American aircraft carrier.

Just before Knox left the ship, the captain explained that the Secretary's sore throat prevented him from addressing the men. But Knox managed two sentences into the microphone: "I'm sorry to come here all shot up like this, but I'm awfully happy to be aboard. Wish you all kinds of luck."

900 WAVES Serving As Plane Mechanics

More than 900 WAVES have taken over jobs of male mechanics at Naval air stations in all parts of the United States.

In addition, the Navy reported yesterday, about 90 WAVES have qualified for assignment as aviation metalsmiths, capable of welding and other jobs necessary in repairing a plane.

Good Will Move

Bill to Repeal Chinese Ban Wins Support

House leaders yesterday decided to run the traditional House restrictionist gauntlet in a strong gesture of good will to China, as the House Rules Committee cleared the Magnuson bill repealing the Chinese Exclusion Acts.

The surprise move, prompted by Administration efforts to bolster Chinese morale and deprive Japan of a powerful propaganda weapon, faced an uncertain fate at the hands of sectional and special interest opposition to any relaxation of the immigration laws.

Informed spokesmen for the Immigration Committee said they hoped to pass the bill by a close margin, but possibly at the price of a horizontal reduction in the immigration quotas of all nations now allowed entry.

One amendment, which is certain to be offered, would repeal the Chinese Exclusion Acts and put Chinese immigration on a quota basis, but provide that the quota for any nationality under the 1924 Immigration Act shall be cut by one-half for 10 years.

A more extreme amendment, which may be offered by Representative Martin Dies (Democrat) of Texas would suspend all immigration during the war.

The Magnuson amendment, hurried through both the Immigration and Rules Committees in advance of Sunday's celebration of the founding of the Chinese Republic, not only removes Chinese exclusion by name, (only China is now so excluded), but puts China on the same 1924 quota entry basis as other nations, permitting entry of approximately 105 Chinese annually. It also amends the naturalization laws to allow Chinese citizenship.

The Administration started urging passage of the bill last spring, but leadership polls indicated a backlog of labor, veterans and sectional opposition, not to Chinese entry as such, but to any immigration relaxation.

Japanese propagandists, meanwhile, highly capitalized failure of Congress to act. The Administration's decision to renew its attempt at passage followed diminution of labor and veterans opposition. The CIO strongly favors the measure, and there are indications the AFL may reconsider its opposition.

House Majority Whip Ramspeck yesterday urged the Rules Committee to report the bill out as a war measure.

The Immigration Committee meanwhile stated in its report to the House: "The tenacity and courage of the Chinese in their terrible ordeal of the last seven years has impelled a respect that we are proud to acknowledge. . . .

It has always been the policy of the United States to help China in her struggle against encroachment upon her independence and sovereignty and we are now brothers in arms in that cause. It is fitting that the incongruity of discriminatory legislation, inconsistent with the dignity of both our peoples, should be eliminated."

British Blunt In Pressing Shipping Goal

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 8.—British ship owners said today they were willing to cooperate with the United States so that the postwar world would have efficient and economic shipping services, but they wanted to make clear that "however important the possession of an adequate merchant marine may be to the United States, to Britain it is a vital necessity."

In a formal statement issued through the general council of British shipping they said ship owners who had met Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery of the U. S. Maritime Commission in London "were not 'shocked' by his 'bluntness' then, nor are they surprised now" by his assertion that the United States had become a maritime nation and intended to remain so with or without cooperation with the British.

The British Council said:

"Having expressed the view that this country must not be afraid to say to its allies that a strong British mercantile marine is just as necessary to this country as its navy, army and air force, British ship owner are not likely themselves to be afraid when an ally says virtually the same thing. This country's policy is to cooperate with America in the spirit of the Atlantic Charter so that the world may have at its disposal efficient and economic shipping services."

Referring to Vickery's statement that Britain had been concentrating on large and fast ships which would engage in commercial competition after the war, while America had been putting more emphasis on "strictly emergency vessels such as Liberty ships, the council said:

"The facts are that the United States and British governments agreed that America was to be the predominant builder of cargo ships and Britain was to concentrate mainly on naval craft.

"The need for a large number of merchant ships at the height of the submarine menace meant that the emphasis had to be placed on quantity, not quality. It is only comparatively recently that both Britain and America have been able to turn to production of faster ships."

Brotherhood Strike Vote Is Predicted

Labor, official publication of the railroad brotherhoods, stated yesterday that it expected the five operating brotherhoods to take a strike vote in protest against an award of 4 cents an hour wage increase instead of the 30-cent hike sought.

Authority to take a strike vote already has been granted to officials of the 15 nonoperation rail unions who have objected vigorously to the Government's failure to act on a proposed contract with the carriers providing for an 8-cent-an-hour increase to more than a million workers.

About 300,000 Involved

The operating case involves approximately 300,000 workers who are generally better paid than the nonoperating workers.

Labor pointed out that the full text of the emergency board's report recommending the 4-cent boost by a 2-to-1 vote indicated that the board members favored granting a larger increase, but were stopped from doing so by the "arbitrary" Little Steel formula. The dissenting member of the board recommended an increase of 7½ cents an hour.

Under the Railway Labor Act, the final decision of railroad labor disputes must be made by the President.

Reaction Voted

Meanwhile the general grievance committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad voted at Cumberland, Md., to reject the 4-cent award and to send a representative to a Chicago meeting of general chairmen of the brotherhoods scheduled for October 22.

Commenting on the projected Chicago meeting, Labor said: "Judging from the temper of the chairmen as reported to the headquarters of their unions, it is anticipated a strike vote will be taken."

Harry A. Porch, general chairman of the Cumberland meeting, and other speakers warned of growng unrest among railroad workers because of long delay in reaching an agreement on settlement of the wage disputes.

By-Pass Suggested

Some sentiment was expressed in favor of by-passing the Government and negotiating directly with the carriers.

Earlier, W. P. Nutter, representing the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, proposed a 27¼-cent increase for passenger service employes of the Pacific Electric Railway Co. to a special presidential board of review holding hearings in Washington.

The review board was set up after Vinson trimmed to 3 cents an hour an award for a 13-cent-an-hour increase for the Pacific Electric employes, precipitating a strike.

New Tax Bill Held Vital Despite Economy

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee last night forecast a drive for economies in war spending, but cautioned that no economy program could substitute in full for a new tax bill.

Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, said he had heard no dissenting voice in calls for economy. Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, ranking minority member of Cannon's committee, said earlier that savings of more than four billion in war expenditures could be made in the next fiscal year.

Without setting an equivalent goal, Cannon said that up to this time Congress had concentrated on trimming nonwar expenditures, netting nearly 1.4 billion dollars out of the last budget, but had been unable to do much about war expenditures.

"Now we are over the hill and in a safer position, and we can and will scrutinize war expenditures more closely," Cannon said.

At the same time, he warned, the real fighting for America's armed forces has just begun, and doubts about expenditures will be resolved in favor of the men on the fighting fronts rather than in favor of economy.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee wound up the first week of hearings on the 1944 tax program with the Treasury's 10.5 billion dollar program and suggestions for a 10 per cent retail sales levy both apparently headed for the discard.

Committee hostility had doomed the Treasury program, and Treasury hostility was thought to have done a similar job on the general sales tax.

Substitutes Sought

Congressional tax experts were at work on substitute suggestions, but Colin Stam, chief of the Joint Tax Staff, said no decision had been made on when to present their proposals to the committee. He said the studies were centered on the income tax.

It was understood that one feature of the congressional study will be a plan to do away with the Victory tax without at the same time freeing some nine million individuals from paying any income levy. The latter result was expected from the Treasury program. A substitute presumably would involve lowering exemptions and revising rates in the low brackets under the income tax structure.

Other Suggestions

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California testified to the Ways and Means Committee in favor of a high luxury tax, but against a general sales tax. He also protested the Treasury suggestion of refundable taxes as threatening a dangerous financing problem immediately after the war. As a substitute for increasing income taxes in the lower brackets, he urged increasing Social Security levies as proposed in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

Representative Curtis (Republican) of Nebraska urged revision of the pay-as-you-go collection system to provide a credit in the withholding levies for contributions to churches, schools and private charities.

'A Lady Takes a Chance' Is Deftly Wrought Comedy

"A LADY TAKES A CHANCE." RKO-Radio picturization of an original story by Jo Swerling, adapted to the screen by Robert Ardrey, costarring Jean Arthur and John Wayne, with Charles Winninger, Phil Silvers, Mary Field, Don Costello, John Philliber, Grady Sutton, Grant Withers, Hans Conreid, Peggy Carroll, Ariel Heath, Sugar Geise, Joan Blair, Tom Fadden, Nina Quartaro, Charles D. Brown and Butch and Buddy and the Three Peppers. Directed by William Seiter. At the Earle Theater.

IF A UNIQUE and strictly escapist "triangle story" is what the amusement appetite has been craving, "A Lady Takes a Chance," the new screen feature at the Earle Theater, should prove the proper dish.

And if you think this three-cornered romance, costarring Jean Arthur and John Wayne, is not unique, this is not too soon to divulge that it revolves about a transcontinental bus tourist, a rodeo star and his horse!

The tale cooked up in this one by Author Jo Swerling and Scenarist Robert Ardrey is utterly simple, as naive and un-selfconscious as anyone could wish, interesting and ingenuously amusing throughout its length—thanks principally to its stars' peculiar deftness at this sort of thing.

When Mollie Truesdale bids her three boy friends goodbye in New York and boards the bus, her prime purpose is to examine the "Fourteen breathless wonders of the West." As it turns out, there is nothing breathless about them until she collides literally with the rodeo and Duke Hudkins, its star performer with the intense antipathy toward matrimony. Duke is spiritually wed to Sammy, his horse, and the steadfast adoration of Waco, his "better half," an ancient relic of the Old West.

Making allowance for the usual feminine vacillation, Mollie finally gets around to some pretty predatory ideas, which lead to such assaults on Mr. Hudkins' susceptibilities as an evening in the town saloon that ends in a first-rate brawl, a chilly night on the desert—and the tactical error of stealing Sammy's blanket—a chaste adventure in a rickety hotel and a final, home-cooked banquet in a tourist camp.

The results of all this are apparent, but not conclusive, until Mollie arrives back in New York—for a minute.

It will bear repeating that all this is unfolded with a quiet naturalness and "quaint" charm that completely obscure the implausibility of more than one of the situations. It is all as unblemished and wholesome as an early-morning mountain breeze and none of it, barring possibly the rodeo and the brief moment of the barroom battle, bears the slightest resemblance to the deeply branded "Western." On the contrary, it is a nice, chummy, little comedy-romance, transplanted from the metropolitan penthouses and night spots out into the clean open air. The whole family ought to enjoy it.

Miss Arthur Stakes Out Her Claim

In a role that fits him better than his leather chaps, John Wayne contributes a splendid job of rugged "he-mannishness," agreeably leavened with bashful comedy and an unaccustomed gentleness, but it is decisively Jean Arthur's picture. It would be a shade off the beam to say that "A Lady Takes a Chance" is another "The More the Merrier," but it is completely within the fact that Miss Arthur makes her Mollie a remarkably demure and engaging creature. Beyond the measure of any other of the camera's comediennes, she has discovered the secret and the value of the breathless pause and the bewildered hesitance of speech of the young lady in a fix. "Timing" they call it. Her timing is perfect. No one else could have done Mollie so well. The same is largely true of Charles Winninger in the role of Waco, and Phil Silvers, as the spieler on the bus. Aside from Mary Field, whose intermittent lament is that there are "no fellas," the numerous others in the cast serve only an "atmospheric" purpose.

The versatile Roxyettes are so prevalent on the Earle stage this week that sight will be lost of the fact that only two imported acts participate in Harry Anger's new revue. These two are the "stepladder" team of Lowe, Hite and Stanley, ranging in even steps from a midget to a giant, and Frank Paris with his inspired marionettes. The former occupy two spots on the bill—first in their familiar knockabout act and later in their pantomimic impersonation of the Andrews Sisters as recorded in "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Man" and "Sonny Boy." The Roxyettes routines range from "White Tie and Tails" through "Paper Dolls" to a patriotic finale, with Eileen Ritter taking her place among the most effective of the songstresses in her interpolated solo numbers. It would be nice to know how come Eileen is so vastly improved a singer.

An especially interesting issue of the newsreel, the Government's "Day of Battle," the life story of a plane carrier, and "Corny-gie Hall," a honey of a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy in color, round out a diverting and deserving program.

All-Star Musical Now at Met.

"Thank Your Lucky Stars," one of the best celluloid musical comedies in recent memory, yesterday morning transferred from the Earle screen to the Metropolitan, beginning its third downtown week at the latter house.

Warners put virually every star on the lot into this one, and it's full of surprises, many of the performers doing just what you'd least expect of them. Bette Davis, for instance, singing "They're Either Too Young or Too Old," with jitterbug interpolations; Errol Flynn singing a comic song with a voice which he pauses to admire—"Wish it was mine!"—and Olivia De Havilland, George Tobias and Ida Lupino in a boogie-woogie number.

Leading roles in the logical and amusing story that ties the production numbers together are played by Eddie Cantor, Joan Leslie, Edward Everett Horton, S. J. Sakall and Tommy Reynolds. Others include Dinah Shore, Alan Hale, Jack Carson, Ruth Donnelly, Hattie McDaniel and Willie Best. Spike Jones' City Slickers also figure in the proceedings.

Columbia

That mildly exhilarating excursion into the war plants, "Swing Shift Maisie," after its earlier successful week on F st., now is on view at Loew's Columbia Theater.

This latest vehicle for Ann Sothern in her popular M-G-M series, despite the implications of its wartime background, is a lively item and a far cry, as the saying goes, from any dreary "documentary." The only things it documents are Maisie's infatuation for a test pilot, momentarily being swindled out of his commission by a selfish boss; the double-crossings of the fake suicide Maisie rescues from her bogus demise, and the eventual solution of the romantic perplexities of the self-reliant riveter, who starts out in the film as the "glamour" of a dog act! Same old Maisie!

In addition to Miss Sothern, long since grown fast to the role, helpful performances are added by James Craig, Jean Rogers, John Qualen and numerous others.

Usual supplementaries.

Stranger Than Fiction

The scene in Paramount's "Let's Face It," which costars Bob Hope and Betty Hutton, where the periscope of a submarine pierces the bottom of a lifeboat, has been approximated in real life, according to a letter received by the studio from survivors of a torpedoing in the Atlantic. Their lifeboat was hoisted out of the water by a U-boat.

Ornamental Oklahoman

MARTHA O'DRISCOLL, disarming deceiver, who, at the age of 14, pretended to be 18 to get into her first picture, "The Great Ziegfeld." She now has been elevated to the rank of dramatic star on the RKO-Radio lot.

Girl on a Bus Trip Meets Cowboy!

JOHN WAYNE AND JEAN ARTHUR costarred in RKO-Radio's production of "A Lady Takes a Chance," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement as chief screen feature of the new bill at the Earle Theater. Charles Winninger, Phil Silvers and Mary Field are others of importance in the amusing comedy-romance of the West that lies along the bus routes.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Oct. 8.

A number of the movie companies have been reluctant to bid for the movie rights to Howard Fast's "Citizen Tom Paine." They feared that our British allies might think it objectionable. Fast heard these reports, went to the New York office of the British Ministry of Information, and asked, bluntly: "Would the British be offended by a movie based on my story of Paine?" . . . "No," said the official who had read the book. "And if you can come to England, his majesty's government will be glad to finance the movie production there" . . . A few days later, Franchot Tone and Frank Tuttle bought an option on the film rights.

FRANCHOT TONE

George Biddle, the artist, performed two jobs during the surrender of the Italian fleet. He sketched the scene, in preparation for his record, in oil, of the event; and he served as interpreter for the admirals on both sides . . . Orson Welles will go to England in three weeks . . . Al Jolson has signed a 13-week radio contract with American Tobacco. It permits him to interrupt the broadcast series whenever he wants to go abroad to entertain troops . . . Jolson, incidentally, is recuperating from an ailment contracted during his recent trip overseas . . . Former Pacifist John Strachey now is a RAF squadron leader.

Bandmaster Artie Shaw left his ship off New Guinea to entertain some of the troops there. After the show, Japanese planes started to bomb the place and the men leaped into the nearest foxholes . . . Shaw's foxhole was within hearing range of a radio in one of the shacks. The radio, tuned in to Tokyo, had not been turned off. And while Artie Shaw crouched in the foxhole, ducking Japanese bombs, the Tokyo broadcaster concluded the recorded musical program with the announcement: "You have just heard the orchestra conducted by Artie Shaw, playing from the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco."

Peter Lyons, recently of the OWI, is completing a play about Congress. Herman Shumlin probably will produce it . . . Elia Kazan, who directed "Harriet" and "The Skin of Our Teeth," will direct the labor pageant at Madison Square Garden November 9 . . . Shumlin, incidentally—who recently issued a statement favoring better percentages for playwrights—gave Howard Fast $3000 for an option on any play Fast writes within the next 18 months . . . Robert Stoltz, composer of "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time," has written a musical biography of his five loves. It's a ballet suite, "Mes Amours." Schirmer will publish it.

Lieut. Col. Itzik Pfeffer, the Soviet poet who was sent here on an official mission, sat next to Eddie Cantor at a dinner in Hollywood . . . "My first name used to be just like yours—Itzik," said Cantor, "but I changed it to Eddie" . . . The colonel laughed, and when he left the party and Cantor said: "Well, goodby Itzek Pfeffer," the Russian corrected him: "No. Eddie Pfeffer."

General Montgomery told a group of soldiers in Britain: "The chief difference between the German and the British soldier is that the German soldier laughs at other people's misfortunes, while the British soldier laughs at his own" . . . Robert Wood of CBS hired a new commentator and asked: "Have you ever traveled abroad?" The applicant nervously confessed "No. Never." Wood replied: "That's fine. We have too many world-travelers around here now" . . . Although "Life With Father" is finishing its fourth year, its war bond performance netted $800,000 . . . Leland Hayward is in a hospital under examination.

Louis Bromfield wrote a story-synopsis in one paragraph. It was shown to film producers and the movie rights were sold for $60,000, plus additional $10,000 installments based upon the picture's eventual gross. After the sale was made, Bromfield's one-paragraph synopsis was expanded to 300 pages—into the book, "Mrs. Parkington" . . . Hume Cronyn, who owns Canadian banks, railroads, breweries and an interest in "Life With Father," signed two film contracts last week. His first, with MGM, was a long-term acting contract, beginning with a job with Spencer Tracy in "The Seventh Cross." Then he signed a contract with RKO, giving them the rights to all his film stories. His first is called "Angel of Miami" . . . The Army newspaper in India published a letter to a soldier by Seaman Schepps, the Manhattan jeweler, advising the soldiers on how to avoid being clipped by Indian jewelry "bargains."

HEDDA HOPPER

Might Be First Lady!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 8.—Rosalind Russell is wanted for a picture at Twentieth Century. I'm hoping it's for Mrs. Wilson. That's what I'd call fine casting. Nothing to the story that Ronald Colman is to play Woodrow Wilson. No gripe against Ronnie, but it would curl the hair of most Americans to have an Englishman play the "Life of Woodrow Wilson." . . . Feuds do flourish at Warners' Ida Lupino and Alexis Smith are the latest. Not on speaking terms. . . . What's this I hear about Jane Russell and her new husband quarreling? . . . Much comment about Tallulah Bankhead and Walter Slezak had on "Life Boat." They don't speak. Here's why. When Italy surrendered Tallu naturally exclaimed, "Isn't it wonderful!" Whereupon Slezak, born in Vienna, replied, "I feel sorry for the poor Germans and hope the Allies won't be too hard on them." Tallulah came back with, "You sound like a Nazi spy!"—and the battle was on. . . . Leland Hayward's collapse is more serious than folks realize. No rooms in the hospital, so he was given a blood transfusion in the corridor. Franz Werfel, author of "Song of Bernadette," suffered a bad heart attack. He's too ill to be moved to a hospital.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

O, My Gosh!

Visiting Marines asked June Allison of "Two Sisters and a Sailor" "If lady soldiers are called WACs, female sailors WAVES, what are lady Marines?" Feathernecks, of course!" . . . If Gen. Claire Chennault has his way, world premiere of "See Here, Private Hargrove" will be held in Chungking . . . Gabriel Heater is en route here to work in "Curly" for a weekly $800. Quite a hunk for a nonactor . . . Since Carl Brisson's success at Club Versailles, New York, he's called "The Grown-ups' Frank Sinatra." He's booked for a solid year of night clubs. His only regret—he can't whip out here to see his new grandson.

Intolerance

Our writers' congress now ended, couldn't agree on policy. After attacking State laws prohibiting interracial marriages, they hissed the mention of Eddie Rickenbacker's life being put on the screen, and refused to let Bob Miller, war correspondent recently returned from Guadalcanal, talk. Theme of Miller's undelivered speech was the contention that the public should be given whole truth rather than half truths, which are misleading, about handling of war stories in the Pacific area. So what the whole thing accomplished, except a mighty large headache to President Robert G. Sproul of UCLA, isn't quite clear. However, it did bring intolerance among our writers out in the open—which is always illuminating.

A Smile, Maybe?

The day Joan Barry's baby was born Charlie Chaplin rented space at his studio to another company. All Charlie's pictures have been made there—and, of course, many screen tests of girls whom he's discovered, which have never seen the light of day. So now they're doing scenes of a caterpillar in "Mr. Curly" at the Chaplin Studio!. . . Grandma Cobina Wright, sr., is passing out cigarettes to all her friends. It's a boy . . . Sabu, the elephant boy who entered the Army six months ago, gets a medical discharge and will go into the next picture with Maria Montez and Jon Hall . . . Judy Garland is attempting to turn songwriter. At least she and Kay Thompson are trying . . . Did you hear about Ray Milland's tussle with a chimpanzee? Ray didn't win.

Bygone Days!

Ginger Rogers' next is "The Gibson Girl," which I hope they'll shelve for a couple of years. Hard to switch your thought from giant bombers to a bicycle built for two . . . When Pat O'Brien and 70 people go to San Diego for "Marine Raiders" they'll live in their own tent city. No other accommodations . . . Margaret Lee, Harry Cohn's assistant 4½ years, is doing mighty well at free-lance writing. She's completed "Bridge Across the Sky" with Jules Schermer, and the screen play of "Ellen of Troy."

Who'll Know?

John Meredith, extra, all het up when picked to be kissed by Jeanette MacDonald after she sings "I'll See You in My Dreams" for "Three Cheers for the Boys." When he learned he was a wounded soldier, with head bandaged, he wasn't so happy . . . Mrs. Henry Fonda and a friend have been offered the hospitality of Stanton Griffis' New York apartment during their stay there. He's spending all his time in Washington.

Bishop Tucker Again Elected To Highest Episcopal Office

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 8.—The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker of Richmond, Va., will continue as Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church for another three years.

This was announced at the church's fifty-fourth triennial convention today following approval of both the Houses of Bishops and Deputies of a canon amendment providing the presiding bishop may hold office until the general convention following his 70th birthday, instead of the 68th anniversary as previously provided.

The tall Virginian, member of an early Williamsburg family, was 69 last July. He was elected to the church's highest office at the 1937 convention in Cincinnati, to serve until retirement.

Bishop Tucker resigned today, effective next June 1, as bishop of Virginia, an officer he has held since 1927. This was in accordance with a resolution adopted by this convention providing that a Diocesan Bishop resign that office when elected Presiding Bishop.

Meanwhile, by a narrow margin, the House of Deputies rejected a second proposal for permitting divorced persons to marry upon approval of a diocesan bishop.

Present canons prohibit marriage of divorced persons except innocent parties in actions based on adultery.

With a majority required, the House of Deputies' lay order favored the proposal, 48 dioceses voting yes, 17¼ no (missionary dioces are given one-fourth vote), with nine divided. The clerical order failed to give the plan the required more than half of all ballots cast, 38 voting yes, 32 no, with 9 divided. (Four clerical and four lay delegates represent a diocese; when they fail to agree, the diocese's vote is cast as "divided.")

Rep. Voorhis to Speak At Conference Tonight

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California will speak at the opening session of a two-day conference of Maryland and Washington cooperatives at American University tonight at 7:30 o'clock. His topic will be "How Can Cooperatives Work Together for a Better Postwar World?"

Tomorrow's panel discussion will begin at 9:30 a. m. Under chairmanship of R. L. Smith, several leading figures in the American cooperative movement will debate the question of "Can Farmers and Consumers Get Together?" The conference is sponsored by the District Cooperative League, 2621 Virginia ave. nw.

Penny Milk Up To Agriculture

Washington school children will again have the benefit of penny milk as soon as the Department of Agriculture approves the measure forwarded to it by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Under the plan sanctioned by the District Government, recipients of the service will be required to pay one cent per half-pint of milk, the Federal Government two cents, and the District Government the remainder.

Harry M. Gardner, supervisor of the program, said yesterday that he was asking bids from dairies. He indicated the program would be started within 10 days.

The contract will be forwarded to the regional office of the Food Distribution Administration of the Agriculture Department in New York for final approval.

It also was asserted that the four-cent ceiling price on half-pints of milk would cause the District to pay not in excess of one cent per half-pint.

Dr. Espil

The countless friends which Dr. Felipe A. Espil has made in Washington and throughout the Nation in the course of his 12 years' stay here as Ambassador of the Argentine Republic will learn with real regret of his recall to Buenos Aires. During that entire period, Dr. Espil has worked with might and main for the improvement of Argentine-American relations. He has combined great devotion to his country's interests with real affection for and understanding of the United States.

Dr. Espil will leave this country at a time when the relations between the two countries have deteriorated badly. Alone of all the republics of this hemisphere, Argentina has persisted in remaining neutral and giving shelter to representatives of the Axis powers. In spite of this record, the late foreign minister, Admiral Storni, recently suggested that Argentina's attitude might change if lend-lease aid were vouchsafed, and the overture brought a sharp and well-merited rebuke from Secretary Hull. Thereupon, Admiral Storni resigned.

Whether the recall of Dr. Espil constitutes a move by the Ramirez regime to show its indifference to American sentiment is not clear. We can only hope that the reverse possibility is the case—that Dr. Espil is being brought back to Buenos Aires so as to be able to give his government the benefit of his long experience in the United States and his deep knowledge of American affairs.

Shipping Report

In no area of our war effort does the complacent assumption that the war is already won present a graver danger than in respect to shipping. The danger stems from pressure exerted by private interests to have ships diverted to civilian trade. It found expression in the recent decision of the Office of Economic Warfare to relax its export controls. It found expression, too, in Admiral Vickery's inept warning to the British that the United States intends to vie for maritime supremacy in the postwar world. The admiral's statement was not only a mischievous irritant to Anglo-American relations but also a dangerous deflection of our own attention from our immediate job. The notion that we have shipping to spare for any purpose other than the direct prosecution of the war is a delusion—a delusion which may make the day of victory more remote.

This is the central thesis of the report issued Thursday by the Kilgore Committee, the Subcommittee on War Mobilization of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. The report is a model of its kind. It is, indeed, the first comprehensive assessment of our shipping resources which has been made available to the public. The lull in submarine sinkings, coupled with a record-breaking output of new ships, has given us three million more tons of shipping than entered into our military planning for 1943. But every one of these tons is needed to speed up the delivery of men and munitions for the European offensive. If they are devoted exclusively to this purpose, if—as the Kilgore Committee puts it, "plans are executed to pack every ship to the last pound and the last cubic foot"—then it may be possible to deliver the decisive blow in Europe sooner than we had expected.

The effectiveness of our mammoth merchant marine depends upon the efficiency with which we utilize it. It is the opinion of the Kilgore Committee that a good deal of waste is entailed in our present system of operation under divided responsibility. Some of our ships are administered by the Army, some by the Navy, some by the War Shipping Administration. In addition, large portions of the United Nations merchant fleet naturally are under control of our Allies. The result is that cargoes are not always distributed most advantageously and harbor facilities are sometimes wastefully employed. The Kilgore report forthrightly urges concentration of control over American shipping in the War Shipping Administration and allocation of cargoes among the United Nations by an Interallied Shipping Strategy Board. These seem sound, common-sense recommendations.

The great shipping resources available to us now present a magnificent opportunity. As the Kilgore report observes, "In our first year of war, the shortage of shipping not only slowed down our operations on the battlefield; more important, it kept us from planning an offensive which would unify our striking power with that of our Allies. It made our planning cautious, even overcautious." Well, we no longer need to worry about a shipping bottleneck. And this means that we can strike harder and sooner than we had hoped. No commercial considerations should be permitted to delay the blow a moment longer than is necessary. For every moment of delay entails a cost in human lives.

Lesson From Gallinger

Senator Holman is unquestionably right in tracing the plight of Gallinger Hospital to "confused and divided authority." We also fully share his doubt that "any real and lasting reform in the conduct of Gallinger Hospital will ever be effected, unless and until the government of the District of Columbia is revamped so that it becomes responsive to the needs of the people of the District . . ." But we do not believe that this investigation should end with merely an even distribution of blame for Gallinger's shortcomings to executive, legislative and administrative officials. For the record clearly shows that the primary responsibility goes back to Congress itself.

Gallinger Hospital has grown enormously in recent years along with the growth of the city and of our civic conscience. Demands upon its services have kept far ahead of the slow improvement in its facilities, equipment and staff. Here is the root of its difficulties. Yet Congress has never been willing to grant all the funds that the Department of Health has requested for Gallinger. Back in 1940, for example, Dr. Ruhland asked for an increase of $445,200 for the hospital and got $89,380. A similar slash was made the following year. Congress was a little more generous in 1942 and 1943; but over the period of six years since the municipal hospitals have been under supervision by the Health Department, Gallinger has been granted less than one-third of the additional funds requested for it.

In some instances these requests were slashed by the District Commissioners and the Budget Bureau. But the final authority goes back to Congress. Usually the Senate has been much more generous than the House. What Gallinger has had to subsist upon has been the comparatively meager sums to which the House would agree.

When responsibility for the present state of affairs is being distributed, moreover, it is well to remember the five-year building program which Dr. Ruhland submitted three years ago. This included new doctors' quarters, a pediatrics and crippled children's building, obstetrics building, an outpatient clinic, an annex to the nurses' home and houses for staff physicians as well as remodeling of the psychiatric wards, the kitchen and laundry, about which so much complaint has been heard. Of these projects only the obstetrics building and temporary quarters for nurses have been provided, although some other renovating has been done.

Senator Holman complains about the absence of discipline and "an atmosphere of futility" among the employes of Gallinger. Obviously that stems from the refusal of Congress to grant the hospital an assistant superintendent as requested by the Health Department, Commissioners, and Budget Bureau. In an institution the size of Gallinger it is utterly impossible for one superintendent to attend to all the administrative details. Lack of discipline is also directly related to the refusal of the Commissioners to let Dr. Ruhland reorganize the nursing service, as he proposed to do more than a year ago. Incidentally, the director of nursing at Gallinger receives only $2,600 a year, less $300 for lodging and laundry, a salary so meager that the hospital can scarcely expect to recruit a highly trained nurse of executive experience and ability.

When all of these factors are considered, it would be surprising if Gallinger were free from discouragement, laxity and inefficiency. There has been no lack of planning to make this hospital a model institution. But there has been appalling failure in putting Health Department plans into effect. For that fact certainly Dr. Ruhland and Dr. Bocock cannot be held responsible. Nor did they have an opportunity to carry their case to the public or directly to Congress. The Commissioners' "gag" rule prevented that. The Commissioners themselves could have been more energetic in fighting for the institutions committed to their charge, but they in turn are subordinate to the Budget Bureau. At present only Congress has the power to correct the Gallinger mess, and that will continue to be the case so long as Congress clings to the power to make specific appropriations for each District institution. We think it is of the utmost importance for the Senate District Committee to bear this fact in mind as it proceeds to reorganize the local government.

Franked Mail

Congressman Hamilton Fish has made an exceedingly curious reply to the American Legion charge that he abused the congressional franking privilege. Specifically, the Legion accused Mr. Fish of having granted the use of his frank as recently as last April to a Nazi sympathizer named C. Leon De Aryan, now under Federal indictment for sedition. In response, the Congressman caused to be printed in the Congressional Record certain extracts from the Postal Laws and Regulations which appear to afford a legal justification for his conduct. It is difficult to construe this in any other way than as a tacit confession of the charge.

Whatever the merits of Mr. Fish's legal defense, the morality of what he did seems very dubious indeed. "I was taken to task recently by the American Legion," he said, "for alleged abuse of the franking privilege because some individual whom I have never met or seen received and mailed some of my speeches. He had a perfect right to do so, just as I had to have my speeches sent out for addressing and mailing. It makes no difference whether the individual to whom they are sent is black or white; Protestant, Catholic or Jew; indicted, arrested, convicted or in jail or out of jail."

These latter considerations may make no difference to Hamilton Fish. But most of his colleagues in Congress, we are confident, will feel somewhat more fastidious. If the postal regulations actually permit such latitude in the employment of the frank, then it is obvious that they invite abuse by any person of Mr. Fish's moral myopia. And it is equally obvious that they should be amended at once if Congress wishes to preserve the real purpose of one of its important prerogatives. Under Mr. Fish's interpretation of the law, the franking privilege, paid for out of public funds, can now be used with impunity to undermine the security of the United States even in time of war.

Just about two years ago Senator Wiley introduced a bill to require the inclosure of a personal letter in any franked mail sent by a member of Congress outside his own State or the District of Columbia. Commenting upon this favorably at the time, The Post remarked that "it is impossible to imagine a legislator giving his own letter of inclosure along with the frank to organizations and men charged with being in the pay of Nazi Germany." In view of Mr. Fish's attitude, we are no longer so certain that this is impossible. But Senator Wiley's proposal would at least impose some check on abuses of this nature. It deserves revival now.

Manifestly, however, it does not go far enough toward restricting the use of the frank within reasonable bounds. Other amendments to the postal regulations are necessary for the simple sake of economy. These need to be applied, of course, to the executive agencies of the Government as well as to Congress. Free mailing has its legitimate uses for the information of the American public. It is now high time to give these uses some common-sense definition.

Lea Committee

The Select House Committee to investigate the Federal Communications Commission is, at last, under the chairmanship it should have had from the outset. Representative Clarence F. Lea, who now heads the investigation, is known for his judiciousness and impartiality. As permanent chairman of the standing House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce he has had broad experience in dealing with communications problems. He is, therefore, on all counts the logical member of the House to conduct an inquiry in this sphere.

In taking hold of this new assignment, Mr. Lea declared: "I trust the investigation will not rest on a plane of personal controversy but rather on the important question as to whether or not this agency and its personnel have been and are now properly performing their duties, their public duties, to the country." It is clear that this trust has no chance of realization so long as Mr. Eugene L. Garey is retained as the committee's counsel. For Mr. Garey has behaved not as an investigator but as a prosecutor—and as a prosecutor with very little regard for fair play or for the dignity of the investigatory process.

Throughout his connection with the Select Committee, Mr. Garey has conducted its affairs wholly on a plane of personal controversy. It was he, it will be remembered, who instructed the members of the committee in how to capture newspaper headlines and how to prevent "the opposition" from being heard. Like Congressman Cox, who selected him, he has an axe to grind. Mr. Lea can best reassure those who desire a full and fair inquiry into the FCC by dispensing with Mr. Garey's services forthwith. The activities of the FCC are complex and will, in any case, require a much higher degree of competence than Mr. Garey has ever demonstrated.

There is real need for a full and fair study of the FCC—not merely because its integrity has been assailed by the reckless allegations of Messrs. Cox and Garey, but because it exercises very broad powers over an industry the regulation of which intimately affects one of our essential freedoms. Technological developments in the communications field have been so rapid, moreover, that our present communications law may be inadequate or require modification. These are matters which a congressional investigation should discover. It should be pointed toward constructive legislation. The study of national problems, and particularly of the handling of those problems by responsible executive agencies, is one of the most important functions of Congress In this situation the function was so burlesqued under Congressman Cox that Chairman Lea can fulfill it only with a fresh staff and a fresh start.

TOMORROW'S MAN

He brings his heavy bird to earth
With feathered ease,
Using the little push of breeze
For what a breeze is worth.

And now his unaccustomed feet
Strike hard on solid street . . .
And he remembers thunder,
Dimly, from gun and storm outflown—
Death beaten by a length—the stone
Weight of the winds gone under.

He has returned. But he will stay
Forever high,
A wanderer in the open way
Of upper sky . . .
His eyes, refusing common green,
Hold the blue meadows they have seen . . .
And, on the other side of clouds and out of sight,
He rides to better worlds and greater light.

Rubber Program

NATIONAL ATTENTION will soon be drawn to the cooperative effort to step up rubber production in the Amazon Basin by reports from 13 American newspapermen now on their way to look it over as guests of the Rubber Development Corp., the United States Government agency now in charge of our part of the work. The attention of Latin-American observers has already been sharply focused on this scene by a story that originated here to the effect that greatly increased amounts of rubber are expected from the Amazon as result of "streamlining" operations there.

The statement in this news story that disease control and food supply projects planned in the interest of the Brazilian worker will be abandoned for good has raised a question in Latin-American minds that ties in with one of the most ticklish questions in our entire Latin-American relations. Since Pearl Harbor the United States and Latin - American governments have begun a vast program to get out many types of war materials for our factories. The United States has bent over backward to see to it that fair returns for their labor should get to the men who do the work. We are helping with both health and food programs where strategic materials are being produced.

Nazi Propaganda

But the Nazi propaganda machine has fought this materials drive every step of the way with the argument that Latin Americans should not sweat in mines and jungles for the Colossus of the North. Any American who understands Portuguese or Spanish and has a short-wave radio can have heard this line broadcast from Berlin for two years. For this reason any hint that the United States is curtailing steps taken to help provide the Latin-American worker with decent medical facilities or food hits a very sensitive spot with our southern neighbors.

The fact behind the "streamlining" of operations of the Rubber Development Co. in the Amazon is that the big reduction has not been in food or medical programs, which this company does not control, but in their plans to build a system of some 17 airports in the valley and to increase the river fleet and port and dock facilities all through the basin.

There were plans to make food and medical care available to the workers who were to go in and these are of course dropped. But the cost of assuring food and medicine for workers, absolute necessities in the Amazon wilds, was a fraction of the cost of the construction program.

The airports program was first planned by Defense Supplies Corp., a subsidiary of RFC, which went into Latin America before Pearl Harbor to help "de-Germanize" hemisphere airlines. This writer has been told unofficially that the Amazon airports were projected because they would be needed if the Germans ever managed to span the gap between Dakar and Natal. However this may be, when Rubber Reserve went into Brazil after Pearl Harbor as operating agency to carry out our end of the rubber development, the airport plan got tacked onto the rubber program.

Amazon Production

Through 1942 it became obvious that more labor was needed to step up Amazon production. Brazil agreed to try to move in 50,000 workers at once. This meant that Rubber Reserve had to organize tremendous transportation and supply facilities. The group who had had charge of the airport program worked out for Rubber Reserve a plan to improve transportation in the Amazon. BEW, nominal planning agency, approved the proposal.

In late 1942, work was started. From the first, actual costs proved higher than had been estimated.

After Jeffers was made rubber czar, the Rubber Development Corp. was formed to take over the whole program and BEW was cut entirely out of the picture. In February the new agency took over the construction program that had grown up under Rubber Reserve and Defense Supplies Corp.

As months passed, two things became plainer. First, that the plan for expansion was going to be very, very expensive, and second, that getting new labor into the Amazon was going to be very, very slow. Difficulties were enormous. In July Rubber Development cut down operations based on this expansion plan and began to try to make the most of facilities already completed.

This, in brief, is the story of the great contraction. The United States is not abandoning the Amazon rubber workers. CIAA health and sanitation and food projects are being continued. They have not only been undertaken as necessary to our operations there, but will leave permanent improvement in the valley.

What rubber yield can be expected from the valley remains a question. I have heard of expert estimates ranging from 15,000 to 76,000 for this year. Realism indicates that the smaller figure is probably nearer right, but it is to be hoped that the higher one can be achieved.

Toward A Policy

By Barnet Nover

On The Uses Of Empire

ON THEIR RECENT world-circling tour of the battlefields, Senators Russell, Mead, Chandler, Lodge and Brewster noted, not without some irritation, that their landing and take-off points were usually in British Empire (or British Commonwealth) territory.

Yet at many of those same points American lend-lease material was being used to build up airports and other installations that may prove of great strategic and commercial value in the postwar world.

The Senators therefore argue that, as a quid pro quo, we should receive access to these bases.

"The use of some of these fields in the future," they point out, "may be just as essential to our security as battleships or divisions . . . These rights of access are also indispensable to the vitally important growth of commercial aviation."

AT FIRST GLANCE this contention would seem to be very much to the point. Upon analysis, however, it reflects some of that very confusion of mind and purpose and aim which thus far has made it impossible for us to work out a coherent foreign policy and of which the Senators are justifiably critical.

In discussing this problem of postwar air bases the Senators appear to be thinking of two different things at once.

They are thinking, in the first place, of American security, which, they believe, may be helped or hindered by our possession or nonpossession, by the securing or the failure to secure the right of access to these airfields.

But they also emphasize that these bases may also be indispensable to us if our postwar commercial aviation is not to be hampered.

BOTH OF THE AIMS the Senators have in mind are wholly desirable. There can be no argument on that score. But we shall have to pursue one policy if our postwar interest in these bases is going to be predominantly commercial, a quite different policy if this interest is to be basically strategic.

So far as the purely commercial use of these fields is concerned, for instance, the arrangement need have no political strings tied to it. Indeed, aside from securing the right of access (assuming that in certain instances that can only be done through governmental action), arrangements as to the operation of the fields, division of costs, regulation of traffic and so on can be done by private American concerns. The American Government, after its initial intervention, might not have to concern itself with the fields at all.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the use of foreign airfields for strategic purposes, that is, basically for the defense of the United States, its outlying possessions and of the Western Hemisphere, involves an altogether different set of considerations.

Then the primary need would not be the right of access but actual occupation, either alone or in combination with the nation that is sovereign in the area.

The basic difference, between the commercial and strategic airfields is the difference between ordinary harbors and sea bases.

SO FAR as the strategic factor is concerned the obvious point must be made that the bases we have helped build in the far-flung corners of the world, including many parts of the British Empire and Commonwealth, we have built in order to help win the war.

We had to do it because had it not been for what we were in a position to do these bases would not be as fully equipped as they are and because they serve us and our Allies as jumping-off points for an assault on the common enemy, be it Germany or Japan.

In retrospect we should be grateful for the circumstance that the dissolution of the British Empire, about which people have been writing and talking for a long time, had not reached the point in 1941 and 1942 where it would have been impossible for us to use the Gold Coast, the Sudan, the Suez region and other parts of the Middle East, India, Australia and New Zealand as bases.

The existence of these British dominions and British outposts, therefore, has helped make it possible for us to win the war.

ON THE STRATEGIC side we now face one of three choices.

The first is to retreat into isolation. This, apparently, is what the five Senators certainly do not recommend.

The second possibility is to acquire all the bases that we need really to insure our security in the future, hold them in fee simple, operate them ourselves. But it is extremely doubtful whether such strategic imperialism would make for peace. It is certain that it would compel us to maintain an Army, Navy and Air Force on a scale that the American taxpayer would certainly not approve of.

The third policy is to continue into the postwar era the philosophy behind our construction, of bases on allied soil, bases which all of us need. This philosophy is based on the recognition of a common interest between us and our allies in a struggle against totalitarian aggression.

If such a policy of common action is agreed on, the securing of strategic rights in bases owned by friendly nations should not prove difficult, and since it would be to the interest of our allies as well as to our own to protect these bases against aggression the cost of defense would be shared.

All of which bears out the point made by the five Senators themselves:

"The need for a clear national policy is strikingly apparent."

Vinson's Reply

Following your courageous position calling for a tax bill which would really help to stem inflation your editorial of October 8, "Tax to Cure," was rather a disappointment to this reader. The fault, however, is not yours so much as Judge Vinson's failure to analyze and reply to the specious argument involved in Representative Knutson's question. Judge Vinson had contended that the increased taxes proposed by the Treasury would help the control of inflation by withdrawing some of the excess public money holdings. Mr. Knutson questioned this contention in view of the fact that persons receiving up to $3000 in annual income account for two-thirds of the national income, but will be called upon to pay only one-quarter of the increased taxes. Judge Vinson might have disposed of this paralogism by the following arguments:

1. The income tax is in essence progressive. This means that the recipients of higher incomes pay higher percentages in taxes.

2. The new tax schedules with postwar credits practically exempt recipients of income up to $2000.

3. In view of this exemption the proposed increase would add over 1700 million dollars to the tax liabilities of persons earning between $2000 and $3000. According to the best available estimates these incomes will aggregate less than 30 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1944.

4. It is doubtful that persons earning less than $2000 have much of the excess money which is exerting pressure on price ceilings and threatening inflation. As to persons earning between $2000 and $3000 the proposed increase, together with present taxes may well draw off a substantial proportion of such excess funds as they have, and that is all that Judge Vinson claimed for the Treasury proposal. These same arguments apply pari passu to the recipients of annual incomes up to $5000, who account for five-sixths of the national income.

Mr. Knutson, therefore, must take the position that exemptions should be lowered more, and that normal tax rates should be raised higher than proposed by the Treasury. These measures to be sure would increase the "take" from the lower income groups. Judge Vinson, perhaps, would not repine at such proposals, but will Congressman Knutson and his associates have the fortitude to make them?

Milk Subsidies

Mr. Pusey of your staff wrote a signed article denouncing the Administration's plan to prevent higher milk prices by paying subsidies to milk producers.

Mr. Pusey seeks to prove his case by his choice of words. Subsidies, he says, "heap this additional burden upon the Government," and more subsidies "will bring us ever closer to the brink of disaster." As for consumers, they have a "mountain of savings" which they cannot spend, and low-income families are experiencing a "prosperity" which is greater than ever before.

Perhaps District of Columbia school teachers and the firemen, policemen and the Government clerks and other fixed income families here will tell Mr. Pusey how eager they are to flatten their "mountain of savings" by paying higher prices for milk and other foods.

The Administration program aims to prevent inflation by meeting increased costs with subsidies. Mr. Pusey says subsidies threaten inflation, but the alternative to subsidies he describes as "slightly higher prices for milk and various other foods."

A "slightly higher" price for milk now, and a "slightly higher" price later on, and a continuing stream of "slightly higher" prices on all the various items of the cost of living—these "slightly highers" are not merely the threat of inflation, Mr. Pusey, they are inflation.

Whoever at this late date tries to persuade farmers that higher prices will solve their problems is selling them a gold brick.

Berlin Express

("This war has become like an express train running at top speed and he who tries to alight on the way will break his neck"—Goebbels.)

The Fritz got on the fast express—
A swift trip was his hope;
The train got out of all control . . .
He can't get off, the dope!

He opened wide the throttle and
He stoked with all his might;
The speeding was so lovely till
It came time to alight.

He was a Nazi Casey Jones;
Oh, he was full of hop!
He let her roar and didn't think
He'd ever want to stop.

* * * *

He gave the engine all he had—
He heard the boilers roar;
(He even threw the brakes away—
It gave him thrills galore.)

He took the sharpest curves in high
And went through spaces fast;
He couldn't tell the towns ahead
From those that he had passed.

He rang the bell with gusto great
And yelled, "Such wondrous speed!
But, ach, if I would stop it, has
It got the things I need?"

* * * *

The boiler blew, the wheels came off . . .
But still the train did fly
And now the Nazi Casey Jones
Began to huff and sigh.

He'd blown the whistle at the start
And had an idea new:
"If whistles help to start a train
They ought to stop one, too!"

He blew and blew and blew and blew . . .
The train kept in full swing;
He now was frightened to the "heils"
But couldn't do a thing.

* * * *

At last the truth came home—alas!
The fact was very grim:
He couldn't leave the engine and
The train could not leave him!

So there he goes around the curves
A dizzy awful sight . . .
AND WORSE SHOULD HE ALIGHT!

Unemployment Plan

The Gaffney plan may be considered by Congress if an unemployment crisis should develop in this country after the war. This idea would call for the staggering of labor power by means of an "alternating system of replacement hiring." It would attempt to accomplish just one thing the 40-hour week fails to do—that is, the "breaking off" of work in huge chunks so as to benefit labor. For example, let us take John Jones, a clerk at Lacy's department store, who makes $35 a week and gets two weeks vacation with pay each year. Under the Gaffney plan, his employer would deduct on each pay day 15 per cent of his wages (same as bond deductions now). This money would be set aside for him in a general fund. Each fellow employe of Jones at Lacy's would come under the same setup and each person would be given a two-month leave from his job, which would include his vacation period. Thus, Jones works a total of 44 weeks out of each year. During his furlough from work the employe receives his general fund (together with his vacation pay) in a lump sum, or as he would be paid by the week. On the basis of Jones' salary, he would receive $300 (not counting overtime).

The real purpose of the Gaffney plan is, of course, to create jobs by simply "dividing the work," as one would divide an apple or a piece of pie. For each five men, under this system, another man would have to be fitted in as an alternate during the furlough period. Adopting this plan on a national scale during an emergency period (during the "war-to-peace transition") would help "soak up" some of the unemployed. The Gaffney plan is meant for only temporary provision in case of an unemployment emergency. Together with a broad plan of public works (road construction, slum clearance, etc.), there would be no great need of a "handout system" through a dole or through relief.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Five Senators

THE FIVE Senators who have just come home from a tour of the battle fronts have raised the question whether charges, some of them very grave—complaints, some of them extremely irritating—should be aired without providing a way by which responsible officials can debate them. Is it useful, for example, to usher in the momentous conference in Moscow by talking about saving "one million American casualties" if Russia went to war with Japan while the President, the State Department, and the War Department are unable to talk back?

LIPPMANN

For obviously they are every bit as much concerned in winning the war quickly and at least cost of life as any of the Senators. Can a subject, which Senator Lodge calls one of "great delicacy," be discussed fairly unless the Senate and the country are able to hear at the same time the views and conclusions of the responsible officials?

THERE IS no doubt whatever that the war against Japan could be won more quickly and decisively from Siberian bases than from any other place. But though Senator Lodge in his public speech showed that he knew better, many of the newspaper reports of his views give the wholly false impression that Japan could be knocked out if Russia made "her Pacific coastal area available to the United States."

THIS IS simply not true, and it is dangerously misleading. For what Senator Lodge is suggesting is not that Russia should let us go into Siberia to fight Japan, but that Russia should fight Japan from Siberia. We cannot now put an army, or even a large air force, into Siberia. It is physically impossible for us to get to Siberia in force. The undefeated Japanese navy is in the way. We could fly in some bombers. But the Russian army and the Russian air force would have to defend the bases against the Japanese army in Manchuria, and Russia would have to supply the oil and the materials to support our bombers over 5000 miles of railroad.

Thus the suggestion is not that Russia give us a place from which we can fight Japan but that Russia open up a great second front in Eastern Asia. Now we have had to put up with the Russian complaint about our not opening up a great second front in France, and they will now have to put up with a similar American complaint that they do not open a second front in Siberia. But let us recognize that the one complaint is as valid as the other: the fact is that Russia is not now fighting Japan in Siberia and we are not now fighting the Germans in France because neither of us is now strong enough to do it, and if either of us tried it before he is strong enough, he would get a bloody nose.

THE COMPLAINTS about our relations with the British demand, I believe, affirmative action by the Prime Minister and the President. The action should be, I believe, to provide a means by which complaints, grievances, charges, allegations, and insinuations can be sifted, remedied, and explained in an orderly responsible fashion.

For our relations with the British are extraordinarily complicated and they extend around the world. It stands to reason that they must engender much friction due to misunderstanding, incompetence, sharp practice, and all the other imperfections of men. In all history there has never been an association of such a scale and of such intricacy as that which the war has brought to the English-speaking peoples. It would be foolish to ignore the difficulties and a mistake to hide them. For we have to learn to work together in a long future. What is wanted, then, is a substitute for ex parte statements, like those of the five Senators, some regular method of examining and disposing of the troubles as they arise.

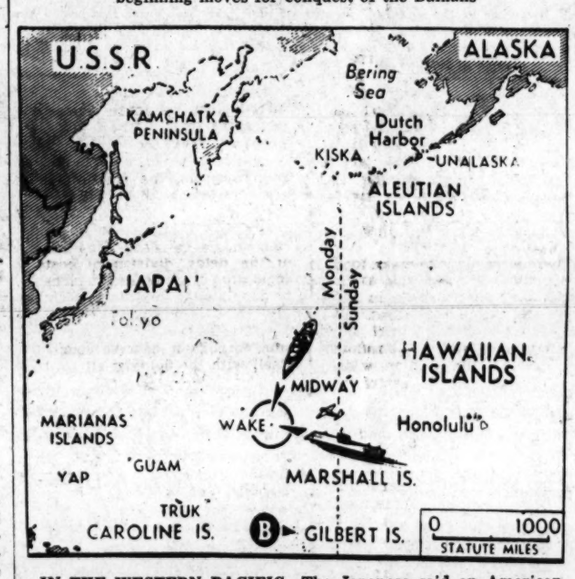
IT MIGHT, therefore, be advisable to consider seriously the idea of establishing some sort of joint mixed commission, judicial in character, to hear complaints and judge them. The purpose of such a tribunal would be to see to it that complaints were dealt with by the responsible officials, and were not allowed to go unanswered, unexplained, and unremedied.

Deplorable confusion has been created by the fact that the Senators are reporting their impressions without having to debate them with responsible officials who know the rest of the story. This confusion needs to be dealt with systematically, or we shall find ourselves in the crisis of this immense war conducting government by allegation.

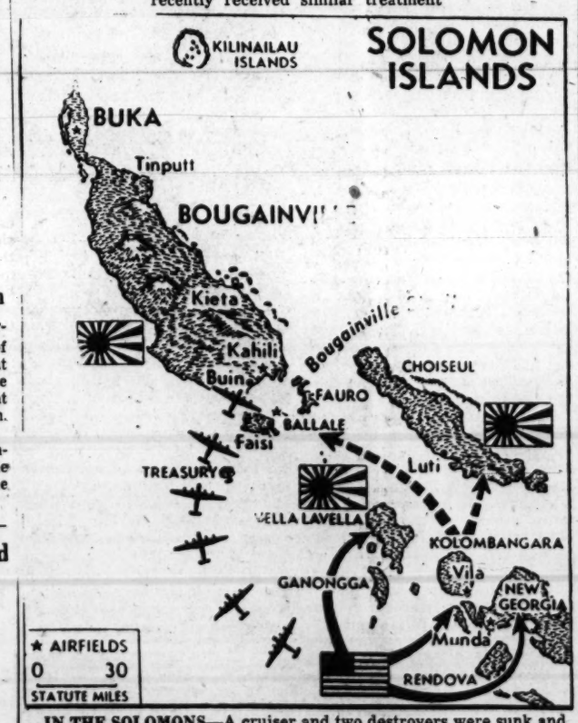
The War Today on the Maps . . . Girdles the Planet

IN ITALY—The American Fifth Army on the west coast stands within 106 miles of Rome (broken arrow) after the capture of Capua on the south bank of the Volturno. On the east coast, the British Eighth fought off hard German attacks about Termoli, 130 miles from Rome (broken arrow). Black line is the approximate front

IN THE AEGEAN—As the Allies moved up the Italian boot, other forces to the eastward occupied the Island of Simi (underlined) near Cos where the Nazis have attacked. British forces also were reported landing in the Cyclades Islands (arcs and arrows) in the beginning moves for conquest of the Balkans



IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC—The Japanese said an American task force again attacked Wake Island (circle) yesterday, perhaps landing troops. Marcus Island (A) and the Gilbert Islands (B) recently received similar treatment



IN THE SOLOMONS—A cruiser and two destroyers were sunk and two damaged when American ships attacked enemy craft guarding the evacuation of Japanese (broken arrows) from Vila. The battle took place between Kolombangara and Vella Lavella. The Japs were driven from Vila by our occupation of surrounding islands (solid arrows). U. S. bombers (symbols) have been pounding debarkation points of the fleeing Japanese on Bougainville

IN RUSSIA—Red Armies widened three bridgeheads across the Dnieper in drives (arrows) around Kremenchug and north and south of Kiev. To the north they stormed Nevel, 70 miles from the Latvian border. Just south of Leningrad 15 miles was gained, and far to the south, thousands of Germans faced entrapment in the Crimea (lowest arrow) and the bend of the Dnieper

OVER EUROPE—Flying Fortresses battered Bremen yesterday, after RAF fleets had struck at Stuttgart, Friedrichshafen and Munich. The Germans raided London Thursday night, and both aerial adversaries were reported back at each other's throats again last night

OPA to Strike At Feed Cost In Milk Crisis

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration soon will launch a program to cut the cost of feeds, to ease the pressure on dairy farmers, R. V. Gilbert, chief economist of OPA, yesterday told the House Banking Committee.

Gilbert said in his opinion "this dairy situation"—with the retail price of milk in several areas not covering the cost of production—never would have existed "if we had acted a year ago on feed costs."

Representative Dilweg (Democrat) of Wisconsin, agreed with him, and charged further: "OPA itself has brought about the increase in the cost of producing milk" by failing to put ceilings on feeds in time to do any good and "deliberately raising mixed feed prices that already were high enough."

Benefits Outlined

The OPA economist said his agency's attack on the feed problem would call for absorption of freight charges by the Government, some outright cuts in prices, and better control over distribution.

He doggedly defended the Government's food subsidy plans and argued with Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, that OPA has operated strictly within bounds set by the Price Control Act. Steagall insisted the agency often acted in direct opposition to "what everybody knows was the intent of Congress."

Subsidy Probe

After 10 days of hearings, the banking committee still is in the "first phases" of its investigations on food subsidies and pricing—to be completed before it votes on the proposal to extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for 18 months and grant it an additional half billion dollars.

Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, said yesterday his group had rejected flatly an Administration request to join other farm organizations in support of the food subsidy program.

He wrote the President: "We do not feel a price ceiling-subsidy program is sound. Every nation in history which has tried to prevent inflation by price ceilings rather than by closing the inflationary gap has failed, and we are failing at an appalling rate."

OPA Not to Collect Stamps From Hoarders

The OPA will not attempt to collect stamps from War Ration Book Four to cover stocks of goods piled up in pre-rationing days and still going point-free.

Four-fifths of the total excess pantry stocks reported by consumers was covered in points from Book Two, Opa said, and to collect for the remaining 15 million cans would be an excessive amount of trouble to volunteer ration board workers and registrants who did no hoarding.

OPA Names Straub to Food Section

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Reorganization of the Office of Price Administration along business lines suggested by Congress moved another notch forward yesterday with the appointment of Walter F. Straub, Chicago food product and pharmaceutical manufacturer, as director of the price agency's Food Rationing Division.

Straub succeeds Harold B. Rowe, who transferred last month to the Office of Economic Warfare.

Straub, founder and president of the W. F. Straub Co., is also a director of College Inn Foods Products Co., Wieboldt Stores, Inc., and the Wiebolt Foundation, a philanthropic institution, all of Chicago.

Another OPA change announced yesterday was the appointment of Truman P. Handy, former general sales manager of the Celanese Corporation of America, as chief consultant on rayons. Handy is to begin his new duties in the Consumer Goods Division October 25.

OPA's personnel realignment also included the resignation of Edward N. Hay, Philadelphia banker, as deputy administrator of the agency's administrative management department. Succeeding him is Glendon J. Mowitt, formerly chief budget examiner of the State of Michigan, who has been serving under Hay.

Hay, who is returning to the Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, Philadelphia, introduced new methods and economies which increased efficiency and at the same time reduced the department's personnel from 1009 to 621 workers, Bowles said.

Legion Head Assails Strikes In Address at AFL Session

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 8.—Warren H. Atherton, national commander of the American Legion, denounced strikes as treasonable today in a two-fisted speech to the AFL convention and was told in an equally vigorous reply by President William Green that he was looking at "the inconsequential faults of a small minority."

If, said Atherton, it is treason for a soldier to refuse to use his gun, "then, too, it should be treason for a man who is fortunate enough to be on the home front to do anything that keeps him from getting that gun."

Green, in reply, said "Those who seek perfection in an imperfect world are doomed to disappointment. But those who follow the pathway of reasoning and logic can look above and beyond the inconsequential faults of a small minority. We are making a fine record in a most imperfect world."

Departing frequently from his prepared text, Atherton said, "I think the men who call strikes or participate in them under present conditions are rendering labor a very great disservice." He cited a recent strike of Pacific electric trainmen and said he did not know why they struck and "the public doesn't know why."

"We lost more planes and ships in those few days than the enemy knocked down in that week. I don't know the trainmen's demands. I am willing to concede they were absolutely justified."

But, he added, an arbitration court had rendered a decision. "Maybe it was wrong. I don't know. That isn't the point. When the umpire calls a man out he's out. He may be wrong, but the man is still out. That's the American system."

Green said the AFL made its no-strike pledge out of "honest hearts" and added that the President of the United States told labor it had kept that pledge 99 and nine-tenths per cent.

"That," said the AFL chief, "was kept by imperfect men. I contend it is an amazing record and in an imperfect world."

Green went on to say that the AFL had a high regard for the men of industry "and we do not denounce industry as a whole for the sins of some in industry. We do not denounce all of industry because some steel company in America supplied our Government in this emergency with defective armor plate.

"I venture to say there are sinners in the American Legion."

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, addressed the afternoon session, blaming the delays of Government labor agencies and the War Labor Disputes Act for many strikes. He said the Teamsters have had cases before the War Labor Board for mnay months and were not getting the service they had a right to exxpect under the no-strike pledge.

"You," he said, "have kept your pledge, but they (the Government bureaus) have not kept their pledge to labor."

Soldiers to Get Gift Records

Servicemen overseas will be able to beat time this Christmas to the tune of American swing recordings received as gifts from friends at home as a result of a change in War Department censorship regulations, it was learned yesterday.

Under the new ruling, recordings of recognized manufacturers may be sent overseas, but recordings of personal messages remain under the ban for security reasons. Previously shipment of all types of recordings overseas was forbidden.

The Office of War Information reported recently that servicemen at some bases were requesting popular swing recordings as Christmas gifts, but pointed out that they could not be sent under existing regulations. Subsequently, the ruling was re-examined and changed. It is understood that the recordings are desired by soldiers at permanent bases who have access to phonographic equipment, but not by men in combat zones.

Gifts may be sent to men overseas without a specific request approved by their commanding officers until October 15.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Soldiers Interviewed Abroad Found Overwhelmingly Opposed to New Dry Law

By Dr. Henry Durant
Director, British Institute of Public Opinion.

London, Oct. 8.—It has often been claimed that had the American soldiers in Europe been allowed to vote on the question in 1918, national prohibition for the United States might never have been written into the law.

Whether or not this was true in 1918, the evidence of a poll among American soldiers taken by the British Institute of Public Opinion on the question reveals strong opposition to any return to national prohibition in America now.

This finding is based upon 500 interviews made among privates, non-commissioned officers, and commissioned officers of the United States Army now located in London and surrounding areas.

The question asked by field representatives of the British Institute of Public Opinion was as follows:

"If the question of national prohibition in the United States should come up again would you vote wet or dry?"

Here are the results of the poll:

Would vote wet	85%
Would vote dry	9
Undecided	6

Thus, among those with opinions, only about 1 in every 10 interviewed would favor a return to national prohibition in the United States.

The vote of the American soldiers with whom field reporters talked serves to underline American public sentiment on the question. In the last poll on the prohibition issue by the American Institute of Public Opinion, approximately two-thirds of those with opinions opposed a new dry law.

The present results of the poll among soldiers should come as no surprise to those interested in the prohibition question in the United States, since all post-Pearl Harbor polls in that country on the issue have shown the younger people more opposed to prohibition than those in the older age brackets, and the men more opposed to a new dry law than the women.

Harvard Club to Hear Brig. Gen. Wickersham

St. Louis, Oct. 8.—The Yankees haven't been reading the script in this World Series. They were supposed to tremble a bit at the idea of meeting up with the Cardinals again, but at the end of three games the roles have been reversed. It's the Cards who have the jitters. The Yanks are the tough guys of the series.

POVICH

Ever since October, 1942, the talk had been of the Cardinals and what a rip-snorting aggregation of base-runners they are—the guys who stuffed their own style of play down the Yankees' throats. They had run the Yankees dizzy in that series, and here it was a year later and, well, it wasn't a pretty picture for the Yankees.

But all the rowdy baseball of this series has been played by the Yankees. The Cardinals have been the lambs. The Yanks have appropriated all of the Cardinals' stuff of '42—the hell-bent base-running, the vicious slides, the good throwing and the smooth defensive play for which the Cardinals had been famed.

The Yankees served notice that they were going to be tough in the opening game when they beat Max Lanier. The play that paved the way for his defeat was from the rowdy school of baseball. When Lanier covered first on a bunt, Frankie Crosetti knocked him sprawling and caused him to drop the ball. Through that opening, the Yankees poured two runs that were enough to win.

They let the Cardinals have it in much the same manner in the third game at a time when they were trailing by a run in the eighth. Third Baseman Whitey Kurowski had the ball in his glove waiting to tag Johnny Lindell on an attempted sacrifice in the eighth inning. Lindell didn't slide into the base. He slid into Kurowski's lap, jolted the ball out of his hand and the Yanks had men on first and third with none out instead of a man on first with one out. They went on from there to win with a five-run inning.

The Cardinals know now about a truism that American League clubs have long been aware of. You can't make any mistakes against the Yankees without getting your brain beat out. Down through the years, Yankee teams have been the great opportunists of baseball. Give them an inch and they take a mile.

For a team that was supposed to carry over into this series a hefty psychological edge against the Yankees in view of what they did to the Yanks last October, the Cardinals have been a sorry gang. They've kicked away two ball games with errors. They've made eight boots in the three games thus far. They saw Lanier make a damaging wild pitch and Walker Cooper wander in an aimless daze while the free ball lay virtually at his feet with Yankee runners advancing unmolested.

Except when they were getting licked by Mort Cooper in the second game, the Yankees have been acting as if the Cardinals were just another soft-touch ball club. They booted two balls in the first game, and haven't made an error since. Joe Gordon has been completely unaffected by his horrible experiences in the series last year. He had been the standout defensive man of both clubs.

The Cardinals got a taste of what American League clubs have been forced to put up with from the Yankees for years in that eighth inning. "The Cardinals are not as strong as they were last year," said Griffith. "A team can't lose outfielders like Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter and say it's not hurt. You can say it, but nobody will believe you." With Terry Moore in center field, the Cardinals would probably have won the third game. Harry Walker is not Terry Moore despite his magnificent catches of fly balls. Walker's weakness on ground balls has been horrible to behold, for the Cardinals. For the Yankees, it has been something wonderful to anticipate.

It could still be a swell World Series, though. Now it's up to the Cardinals to get tough again. It would be stupid to underestimate them. They bounced back to win the second game against Bonham, and the way they won the National League pennant showed they can't be cowed easily. Time is running out for them, but they have come off the ropes before.

In the one item in which they weren't supposed to be on a par with the Yankees, the Cardinals have surprised them. That has been the pitching, with Lanier, Cooper and Brazle turning in magnificent games, only to fall victim to misplays. Their pitching gives them a chance to rare back at the Yankees and still win this series, if they can collect themselves and play some ball otherwise, which they haven't been doing.

Notre Dame Favored to Beat Michigan Eleven Before 86,000 Today

By Harold Claassen
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 8.—Rolling out the brain barrel for the third week of football predictions and hoping that the numbers all come up black:

Notre Dame over Michigan: Realizing that a Michigan team last year without Hirsch and Daley defeated the Irish but figuring that Bertelli's passes will be decisive this time. Should be a thriller for the 86,000 spectators.

Navy over Duke: The Middies have four complete, high-grade backfields, which should keep Duke scurrying for cover and the 63,000 fans thumbing through their programs.

Pennsylvania over Dartmouth: What the middle of that Penn line does to the opposition is a caution, but it might be close, which would be a surprise to the 50,000 partisan spectators.

Southern California over St. Mary's Preflight: Here is where we and the 30,000 fans in the stands really find out how good the Trojans are.

Texas A. and M. over Louisiana State: The Cadet line should be able to stop those 200-pound blasts of Steve Van Buren. It's a night fray that will attract 25,000.

Great Lakes over Ohio State: The Sailors' experience to apply the brakes to Ernie Parks. Everyone of the 22,000 seats will be occupied again.

Army over Temple: Army's Glenn Davis is the most discussed back in the East, and he's only a substitute for the ailing Doug Kenna.

Georgia Tech over Georgia Preflight: The Engineers have had a week to rebuild since that Notre Dame thing.

Rice over Tulane: Figuring that the Tulane hasn't recovered from the Memphis Naval shock as yet.

Pittsburgh over West Virginia: Clark Shaughnessy's T-formation to pay its first dividend with 25,000 Pitt stockholders there for the big day.

College of Pacific over California: Here's where Amos Alonzo Stagg steps back into the big time with a triumph and to the applause of 30,000.

Princeton over Cornell: It is the final game for a trio of the Tigers' Navy trainee regulars.

Yale over Columbia: Yale built a new offense, Columbia a new line during the week. The Elis had the easier job.

Penn State over Colgate: This might be close, especially if Mike Micka is turned loose.

Indiana over Nebraska: Watch Bob Hoernschemeyer go.

Purdue over Camp Grant: One of the Big Ten's best to outscore the Soldiers.

Missouri over Kansas State: Missouri has the poorer record but it has been playing better teams.

Texas over Oklahoma: Not much to choose here.

Virginia over Richmond: The Cavaliers to keep rolling along.

Colorado over Utah: In other years this would have decided the conference title.

Clemson over Virginia Military: Those Clemson frosh are doing all right.

Tulsa over Texas Tech: A Southwestern thriller.

Finishing in a hurry: Wisconsin over Illinois, Iowa State over Kansas, Marquette over Lawrence, Sampson Naval over Villanova (Sunday), Harvard over Worcester Tech, Holy Cross over Coast Guards (Sunday), Brown over Tufts, North Carolina over Jacksonville Naval, Camp Davis over North Carolina State, South Carolina over Presbyterian, Maryland over Richmond Air Base, March Field over UCLA.

Roosevelt Wins 3d in Row, Beats Central, 7-6

Wilson Held 0-0 by Tech In Thriller

Morris Passes and Kicks Riders Home As Vikings Show New-Found Fight

The two underdogs of the inter-high series took a new lease on life yesterday as twice-defeated Tech held Woodrow Wilson to a 0-0 tie that threatened at times to be anybody's game, and Central, thumped roundly in its two previous starts, lost to Roosevelt by the narrow margin of 7 to 6.

Central still lies at the bottom of the high school heap, however, with three defeats, and Roosevelt is currently at the top; having trounced Eastern and Anacostia. Wilson has suffered one defeat at the hands of Coolidge and has a win over Central on the credit side of the ledger. Tech has two defeats and a tie Coolidge has victories over Wilson and Tech. Western a victory over Tech, and Eastern has a loss to Roosevelt. Anacostia won from Central, lost to Roosevelt. The series stew will be stirred some more at Central Stadium at 3 p. m. today when Western meets Eastern.

Coolidge suffered a 6-0 defeat by George Washington High at Alexandria last night when a G. W. Player fell on the ball behind the goal line on a blocked punt. Anacostia also fell by the wayside in a humiliating 30-0 loss to the Washington-Lee Generals and Landon School won its game with Baltimore Friends, 6-0.

Roosevelt Takes Lead in Series

End of a heart-breaking game for Central found Roosevelt out in front by a 7-6 margin yesterday as the Riders maintained their lead in the interhigh series at the Orange and Blue stadium.

Coach Jan Jankowski's Vikings, last year's champions, played a brand of ball that marked them as Roosevelt's toughest competitor to date. Tom Sweeney, triple-threat letterman, paced the losers with a display of passing and punting that resembled the attacks of last year's squad.

Artie Boyd Play

Rider Quarterback Irving Morris pulled a typical Coach Artie Boyd surprise play early in the second period that netted 59 yards and the Riders' winning score when he passed to "Rock" Dodge. Morris, who had never thrown a pass in a game before, baffled the Central defense by dropping back and heaving a beautiful spiral over their heads to the waiting arms of End Dodge. The all-important extra point came from the toe of Morris.

Roosevelt kicked off only to regain the ball after a Central fumble on the 50-yard line and the Vikings held for downs on the 42. The ball crossed and recrossed the midfield stripe as both teams held for downs in the last minutes of the first half.

Central came back strong in the third quarter to take over after End Owen Morris blocked Sid Draxin's punt on the 44 marker. A

Southworth Picks Lanier For Sunday

Card Southpaw Slated to Oppose Marius Russo in Fourth Series Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, Oct. 8.—Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees projected the name of his once-ailing left-hander, Marius Russo, full into the 1943 World Series spotlight today with the announcement that Russo would face the Cardinals in the fourth game on Sunday.

Thus McCarthy, now fortified with a 2-1 lead in games, is passing up, temporarily, Spud Chandler, who pitched the Yankees to an impressive 4-2 victory in the opener, in favor of the lately sensational Russo.

The series encountered an open date, devoted to traveling today, and tomorrow also the teams will idle, but when play is resumed on Sunday Max Lanier will be on the mound for the Cardinals as Russo's pitching opponent.

Lanier Logical Choice

Lanier is the definite and logical choice of Manager Billy Southworth, in deference to his clever, although losing performance in the first game when his own fumble and a wild pitch beat him. He will have had four full days rest.

McCarthy announced Russo would pitch for the Yankees, with one reservation. "I can always change my mind," he said, "but it looks like Russo." The Yankee manager, unlike the Cardinals, is in a position to gamble.

Russo, after suffering with a sore arm for most of the season, has lately been about the most impressive of the Yankee pitchers. He won two of his last three starts with a two-hit and a four-hit performance. McCarthy is aiming to stop the Cardinals' power hitters, Harry Walker, Stan Musial and Ray Sanders, with southpaw pitching. They are the left-handed swingers in the Cards' batting order.

En route to St. Louis on the same train with the Yankees today, the Cardinals were in an angry mood at the vicious base-running of the Yankees in the series thus far, and mutterings were heard, indicating that with the renewal of the series, they would also try their hand at rough stuff on the base paths.

Tickets Selling for $60

The City of St. Louis is still cocksure of its Cardinals and today reserved seats at Sportsman's Park could be bought only from speculators, who were dragging down such fancy prices that a pair of $5.50 grandstand seats for Sunday's game were selling for $60.

In Sportsman's Park, the Yankees become more of a home run threat than the Cardinals, with the left field bleachers a target for such right-handed hitters as Joe Gordon, Frank Crosetti and Bill Jonhson. Charley Keller, Bill Dickey, Nick Etten will be aiming for the right field screen and roof.

Coolidge Bows To GW High Eleven, 6 to 0

A blocked punt behind their own goal line for the only score of the game brought the Coolidge Colts their first defeat of the season in a game with George Washington High at Alexandria last night.

The score came in the first seven minutes of play after Coolidge, on the 18-yard line after an exchange of punts, was handed a 15-yard penalty for holding. Shullenbarger went behind the goal line to punt and McGuire blocked it. The ball bounced a time or two and G. W.'s Campbell fell on it.

Near the end of the third period Coolidge had a chance to score when the Colts recovered Dodge's fumble, but three pass attempts failed and Boteler of G. W. kicked out of danger. Dodge was the Alexandria star, breaking away continuously on spreader plays for 15 to 20-yard gains to the cheers of the 3500 spectators. Bassin and Shullenbarger looked good carrying the ball for Coolidge.

Unbeaten Duke, Navy Teams Clash Tonight

Near-Capacity Crowd of 63,000 Expected To See Baltimore Stadium Game, 7 P. M.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—Unbeaten, unscored on Duke and unbeaten, untested Navy clash here tomorrow night in one of the Nation's two top games of the day which may pack rickety Municipal Stadium to its capacity of 63,000 fans. Only Michigan and Notre Dame at Ann Arbor rate equal billing with the fifth clash in the Blue Devil-Middie series.

Game time will be 7 p. m. a concession to the Baltimore transit companies, who haul defense workers by the tens of thousands before and after the dusk kick-off time. A contingent of 1600 midshipmen, accompanied by the Naval Academy band, will march into the stadium, beginning at 6:15 p. m.

Naming a favorite must be left up to the individual bettors, as the game is an absolute toss-up. Coach Eddie Cameron's Blue Devils, supplemented by Navy V-12 transfers, are already mentioned with Duke's greatest teams. Coach John Whelchel has a generous sprinkling of transfers, including Alabama's Bob Jenkins and Don Whitmire, with his veteran Navy eleven.

Regulars Played Briefly

Against their only common opponent, North Carolina Preflight, Duke won by 40-2 and Navy 31-0, but Navy regulars played only 14 minutes, while Duke's first-stringers played most of the game. The Carolinians also rolled over respected Richmond, 61-0 and Lejeune's Marines, 40-0. Navy last week routed Cornell, 46-7, giving up a score on a 60-yard pass play against a combination of third and fourth stringers.

Both first teams are backed solidly by exceptional replacements and Navy can go four deep in reserve strength. Navy's regulars have played only 29 minutes in two ball games. In an impressive 1305 yards gained in three victories, Duke has gained a ratio of 2 yards rushing to 1 in the air while Navy has leaned toward its brilliant ball carriers with more than 3 yards rushing to 1 through the air in 675 yards gained in two games.

Given solid footing a wide open and high scoring 60 minutes should be the order of the day. Navy's backs have added the constant threat of trickery and deception led by the driving, passing and punting specialist, Hal Hamberg, who is equally adept at the three requirements of a triple threat back. If it's not Hamberg Navy can toss Ben Martin, Hillis Hume, Gus Crawley, Bruce Smith, Bill Barron, Jim Pettit, Joe Sullivan and the brilliant broken field runner, Bob Jenkins, at the Blue Devils.

Luper, Hamberg Rivals

Against Hamberg's passing Duke will counter with the talented arms of a Duke product, Buddy Luper, a star last year, and Mississippi State's Billy Jack Murphy, with the latter specializing in tosses to former and present teammate, Lloyd Blount. Spook Murphy, also of Mississippi State; Buddy Mulligan of Duke, and Tom Davis, with Duke last year, all have impressive ball-carrying records, and Davis handles most of the punting.

Duke's line, with Guard Jim Myers, captain-elect of Tennessee before he entered the V-12 program, and a Duke product, Tackle Bill Myers, as outstanding performers, stacks even with Navy's sturdy wall captained by End Al Channell. Wake Forest, South Carolina, Mississippi State, and Tennessee are represented on Duke's starting line.

Duke will not have All-American End Bob Gantt available for regular end play, due to a broken hand, but Big Bob will be on hand for his specialty, point-after-touchdown kicks, and he has made good on 17 of 19 to date. Navy will depend on Gus Hampton, used for extra point attempts only, who has made only 5 of 12 thus far.

Probable lineups:

Duke	Position	Navy
Cittadino	L.E.	Channell
Preston	L.T.	Gillooly
Milner	L.G.	Brown

W-L Smothers Anacostia by 30-to-0 Score

Jack Granger, Washington-Lee's ace fullback, scored three touchdowns yesterday afternoon as the Generals defeated Anacostia, 30-0, on Ballston field.

The Little Generals went on the field minus three of their regular backfield men. Myron Gerber and Billy Earl, quarterbacks, were given a rest. Frank Trokia was out with an infected face.

Washington-Lee's first score came when Bill Stevens caught a 20-yard lateral from Jack Carney and raced 15 yards to the goal line. Druckenmiller kicked the extra point. Five minutes later, Carney passed again, this time to Granger, who took it on the 20 and ran for a touchdown. Druckenmiller again converted.

In the third quarter, Granger intercepted a pass from Anacostia's Laddy Prahaska on Washington-Lee's 12-yard stripe and ran around the left side of the field for the third tally.

In the third period, Granger took a short pass from Henry and went fifty yards for the fourth touchdown. Druckenmiller converted and the score stood at 28-0.

Billy Gore scored a safety in the fourth period when he blocked Quinn's punt.

Johnny Baker, former Washington-Lee and George Washington University coach, now a naval lieutenant, was on hand.

Carroll Installs Yanks 2-5 Choices

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 8.—Odds of 3-to-4 on the New York Yankees and 11-to-10 on the Cardinals were offered today by Betting Commissioner James J. Carroll on the fourth game of the World Series, to be played here Sunday.

Still favoring the Yankees, Carroll's odds are 2-to-5 on New York winning the 1943 classic and 2-to-1 on St. Louis.

Petro Accuses Rival of Spying

Danny Petro, hard-hitting local southpaw who meets Lew Hanbury at Uline Arena Wednesday night in the feature 10 rounder of Promoter Goldie Ahearn's card, yesterday left for Philadelphia, where he will place himself under the tutorship of Lew Tendler, one of the greatest southpaws in ring history.

Petro, who regards his fight with Lew, an amateur rival of other days whom he has never met, as the most important of his career, suddenly quit training in a huff Thursday at Ahearn's gym when he spotted Ray Hanbury, Lew's brother, in the audience. He accused the Hanburys of spying on his activities. Meanwhile, Hanbury continued his workouts at Ahearn's gym yesterday and will conclude hard training today.

Dodgers Weak on Ground, Redskins Wary of Airways

Unless Brooklyn Dodger Coach Pete Cawthon has come up with a ball carrier during the past week, the Redskins will merely have to check the air lanes tomorrow and Coach Dutch Bergman will come out on top in the meeting of the first-year coaches. That is, of course, on past performances. Pete Cawthon, the drawling Dodger mentor, is also a rookie in the pro-coaching ranks.

In two games to date, the Dodgers have averaged six inches per attempt in rushing the ball with a 33-yard total in consecutive defeats, 27 to 0, at the hands of the Detroit Lions and a 17-to-0 lacing by the Phil-Pitt Steagles.

"Gained" Minus Two Yards

Against Detroit, Brooklyn finished with minus two yards rushing, and last Saturday night they picked up 35 against the Steagles. In the meantime the Dodger opponents have outgained them better than 3 to 1 with 296 yards.

With veterans Dean McAdams, Merlyn Condit and George Cafego handling the passing the Dodgers look a little beter in this department with 210 yards gained. The Dodgers apparently have come up with a better than average pass defense, too, as opponents have clicked only 11 times in 45 attempts, although most of the passes made good against them have been long ones.

Brooklyn was never inside Detroit's 20-yard line while last week against the Steagles the Cathon-coached club was inside the 10-yard line twice but drives fizzled and on another occasion what looked to be a touchdown pass was dropped in the end zone.

Cathon, in the midst of installing the tricky offense which made his Texas Tech teams famous, will present a starting line-up which includes only four members of the Mike Getto-coached Dodgers of last year. Three of the Dodgers are from other clubs and four are rookies, including Hermie Schmarr, now a tackle but an end in his college days at Catholic U.

Due To Serve Plenty

Redskin Coaches Bergman and Turk Edwards and Dr. Clarence Spears, who has been scouting for Bergman, are all of the the opinion the Dodgers are due to break out in a rash of points but they sincerely hope it will be delayed at least a week. Brooklyn on paper, figures to be far better than its scoreless showings to date.

Last year the Redskins beat the Dodgers 21-10 in Brooklyn in a good ball game and then turned it on by 23-3 here.

Only a few scattered tickets, including those behind posts, and so marked, remain to be sold and in all probability not a single ticket will be sold at Griffith Stadium tomorrow as the game will be a complete sellout. Game time is 2 p. m.

Little Series To Columbus

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 8 (AP).—Columbus of the American Association won its third straight Little World Series championship tonight, defeating Syracuse of the International League, 4 to 2, to take the 1943 classic by a four-games-to-one margin. Elwyn (Preacher) Roe held the Chiefs to five hits and fanned 11.

A's Get Radcliff From Tigers for Heffner and Swift

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 8.—The Philadelphia Athletics have obtained Rip Radcliff, 35-year-old outfielder, from the Detroit Tigers in a swap for Catcher Bob Swift and Infielder Don Heffner.

The deal was announced by Connie Mack, here for the World Series. The A's got both Heffner and Swift from the St. Louis Browns, the former by waiver and the latter by trade.

Radcliff has been with the Browns and the Chicago White Sox, as well as the Tigers, in his 10 years in the majors.

Knockout Artist On Turner's Card

Aaron Perry, local Negro lightweight who set some sort of a record last week by recording a 24 second kayo over Mario Gentile, will meet Maxie Starr, Edgewood Arsenal soldier, in a special six-rounder supporting the Georgie Parks-Nap Mitchell heavyweight 10-rounder at Turner's Arena Monday night.

Starr, knocked out in six by Beau Jack and Nick Latsios in his last two starts, is a furious type of fighter and showed rare gameness against both Jack and Latsios. Parks, training daily at Turner's in preparation for his more experienced foe, has been promised a shot at Al Hart if he succeeds in beating Mitchell, a Philadelphian, who has met many leading heavyweight contenders with fair success.

Chicago Bears to Lose Osmanski, Geyer, Siegal, Steinkemper to Navy

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Four members of the Chicago Bears Football Team will depart for duty in the Navy at bases throughout the Nation within the next three weeks, officials of the club said today.

Those who have been called up are Fullback Bill Osmanski, Halfback Bill Geyer, End Johnny Siegal and Tackle Bill Steinkemper. The first three are regulars.

Geyer, one of the Bears' leading scorers and pass receivers, is scheduled to leave for Hollywood Beach, Fla., following Sunday's game with the Chicago Cardinals. Osmanski is to report to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station October 18, while Siegal will go to a Navy base in Maryland a week later. Steinkemper will report to Quonset Point, R. I., about November 2.

Pimlico Opens With Split Feature

$7500 Test Divided Into Two Sections

Capital Handicap Draws 19 Entries; Cassis, With Regards Favored in Sprints

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Half as long, but twice as good, will be Maryland's fall racing season opening today at Pimlico. Instead of the usual 60 days of autumn sport, wartime curtailments have forced the Free State to squeeze its turf action into a single 30-day session, with the result that Maryland will offer the greatest meeting in more than 200 years of the thoroughbred sport in the State.

The campaign, destined to take in six Saturdays, will be a condensed meeting of Maryland's four major tracks—Laurel, Havre de Grace, Bowie and Pimlico. All of the big events usually scheduled for those tracks will be crowded into the month of action, many of them being run on distant soil for the first time, but they will go down in the record books to the account of the individual ovals.

A sample of the kind of racing the Baltimore course will offer came with the releasing of the entries for today. The $7500 added Capitol Handicap, feature of Laurel's opening day in other years, drew 19 horses. The powers that be decided that this number would make for a too bulky field. So the race was split—ten in the first section and nine in the second—but the purse for both divisions will be $7500 added.

Twin Sprint Races

The twin sprints, at six furlongs, should provide plenty of speed and each boasts a horse headed for definite favoritism. In the first half, the sixth race, Cassis, packing 125 pounds and giving from 19 to 21 pounds to his rivals, is the probable public choice. He will tackle, among others, the formidable Sollure, the speedy but not always dependable Cape Cod and the fast Adulator.

In the second division, the seventh race, With Regards appears headed for favoritism. With Regards, shares top weight in his division with Signator, both being assigned 124 pounds by Racing Secretary Charlie McLennan. Both are in excellent sprinting form but will have to be at their best to handle such as Challamore, Pompion and Porters Cap.

Eight Flat Races

Although next week's programs will include steeplechasing, today's card will consist of eight flat races, two of these given over to 2-year-olds. Post time for the Saturday cards has been placed at 1 o'clock, but other sessions during the week will open at noon, as was the case last spring at Pimlico.

Lured by more than $600,000 in prize money, the Nation's topflight horses have gathered at the Baltimore oval or will be available for their engagements. The 29 stakes attracted almost 1,300 nominations, and many of the divisional championships of the year will be settled at the meeting.

Undoubtedly the greatest interest will center around the 2-year-olds, who are given nine stakes chances. From the way they have been upsetting one another all year in other parts of the country, it must be that some order will come to them at Pimlico.

The older divisions will keep the balance of racing interest several times each week, what with frequent distance handicaps on the program and regular sprint stakes on the card.

Improving Richmond Fliers Play Maryland

Tushak May Get Starting Position; Thunderbyrds Won Last Week

A University of Maryland eleven that doesn't know quite what to expect in the way of competition, meets Richmond Air Base today at 2:30 p. m. at Byrd Stadium, College Park.

The Old Liners only recently scheduled, and thus haven't scouted, the Thunderbirds. The only thing the Old Liners know is that the Airmen were smothered, 45-0, by Richmond University, held Virginia to a 7-7 tie and then broke into the win column last week by defeating Fort Monroe, 6-0.

Reports from Richmond, however, indicate the Thunderbirds have a capable backfield and a strong line. The backfield, composed of Tom Robertson, Ed Wallet, Frank Gregory and Emil Frestrak, showed vast improvement and potential power against Virginia and Fort Monroe.

Spears Experiments

"Doc" Spears, Maryland coach, has been experimenting most of the week in juggling his line after hit by the double loss of End Ralph Fico and Tackle Jake Jacobsen, who have entered the armed forces. Wilbur Rock, who played both tackle and end against Wake Forest last week, again worked at both positions. Mike Zetts, a tackle, worked at guard; Les Daly, regular guard, tried his hand at end; Ed Hurson, 200-pound flankman, took a turn at center and Dick Terry, reserve center, gave it a whirl on the wings. However, barring the unforseen, all will continue in their normal positions today.

Pat McCarthy, a fine end who was expected to enter the Army, will again take over one of the ends and hopes for his continuing with the team were raised this week when it was revealed he will not be called for several more weeks.

Tushak May Start

Maryland's backfield of Joe Makar, Bob Troll, Bill Hickman and Charley "Chuck" Schoenherr, which started against Wake Forest, will again take the field, but Dick Tushak, who caught Joe Makar's pass as time ran out against Wake Forest and who ran 65 yards to score on a play covering 87 yards, which won the game, is a possible starter in place of Hickman, the Old Liners' leading ground gainer. Gordon Taylor, who was replaced by Troll, is also slated to see plenty of action as is Bill Pirronello, who flashed brilliantly against the Deacons.

Marlboro Given OK for 10-Day Meet in November

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8.—Marlboro's race track was granted permission for a 10-day meeting to follow Pimlico's four-track session at a meeting of the Maryland Racing Commission here today. The Prince Georges County track was granted dates from November 17 to November 27 and the racing will include two Saturdays and Thanksgiving.

Frank Small, jr., chairman of the commission, said, "Hagerstown and Cumberland staged successful meetings this year. The pleasure ban has been lifted and we see no reason for denying sanction to a Marlboro meeting."

In other years, Marlboro has conducted its racing the last two weeks in August.

Landon Beats Baltimore's Friends, 6-0

Landon School won a hard-fought ball game from Friends School of Baltimore yesterday by a 6-0 score, but the Landon boys looked much better than the score indicated for there were two more touchdowns recorded in the last quarter called back, one for offsides and another for clipping.

On the touchdown that counted Jim Miller ran the ball from his own 10-yard line, on an off-tackle play, to the Friends' 10. Two plays later Brett Miller scored on an 8-yard run on a fake reverse. It was nip and tuck in the early periods, with Friends threatening twice in the second period. But Landon made two goal stands, took the ball on downs and kicked out of danger. The game ended with Landon on the Friends' 5-yard line after Smith had run the ball from his own 10 on a series of line smashes.

24-yard run over left guard by Fullback Ben Swartz put the ball on Roosevelt's 20. Sweeny plunged to the 15 and on the next play passed to Halfback Larry Fyanes for six points.

After kicking and holding for downs Central took over on the Roosevelt 40 and marched to the 16 only to be halted by Roosevelt as the quarter ended. Roosevelt came near to paydirt in the last two minutes of play and the gun found scrimmage on the Viking 23 after a 5-yard penalty.

Tech Gridmen Hold Wilson, 0-0

It's sort of stretching a point to call a 0-0 tie an upset, but when as obvious an underdog as Tech holds a favored team like Wilson to that score and threatens several times it can't be classified as anything else.

For the rejuvenated Tech team swarmed all over the more highly touted Wilson eleven yesterday and came very close to scoring in the last 4 minutes of play. Tech was aided by some bad breaks for Wilson, but still gave a much better account of itself than its two previous defeats would indicate.

Outstanding bum luck for the Tigers came just as the half ended, but a Tech player abetted that bad luck. Buell of Tech tossed a long pass, intended for Al Davis, and Pierce Godfrey grabbed it on his own 45, eluded a couple of Tech players and began a long run toward the goal with half of the Tech team trailing him. He was on the five when a phantom named Fant caught him and downed him on the 1-yard line. Wilson lined up to buck over and the half whistle blew.

Tech Recovers Fumble

A short time before, Godfrey had uncorked a beautiful 40-yard pass to Case on the 10, but it was called back because he had crossed the scrimmage line. Another shorter one to Behrens was called back for the same reason. Godfrey did yeoman duty in the kicking line, most of them stretching more than 60 yards.

Tech, playing good defensive ball, did not get moving until the last four minutes of play. Then Layton recovered a Wilson fumble on the 20 and Bladen ran it to the 6. Bladen went off tackle for a yard, Fant took it for another. Then the Wilson line stiffened and Fant was thrown for a loss. Tech lost the ball on the next play on downs and Godfrey kicked back to the Tech 40.

There were plenty of fumbles, especially in the opening minutes of play, and one recovered by Wilson on the 16 looked like an early touchdown, but the Tech defense was too stiff.

W. G. Feely, Washington Attorney, Dies

William G. Feely, 57, a Washington attorney who had resided in the District for more than 30 years, died yesterday at his home, 4221 Argyle ter. nw., after a brief illness.

Mr. Feely, who was a member of the firm of Vogelsang, Brown & Feely, with offices here and in San Francisco, received his law degree in 1911 from Georgetown University. He had previously attended Brown University.

The son of the late John R. and Mrs. Mary Gilmore Feely, he was born April 19, 1886, in Providence, R. I. He attended public schools there before going to college. In 1931, Mr. Feely was awarded the honorary LL. D. degree by Columbus University, of which he has been a member of the board of trustees and vice president for many years.

Our 'Dumb' Animals

Smethport, Pa.—A saddled, riderless horse trotted up to a group of well diggers and stood patiently while the men talked, puzzled. Finally one of them mounted into the saddle. The horse turned and galloped about a mile to where Norman Hull lay with a fractured leg. Hull, hurt in a fall, said he sent the horse for rescuers.

"Hey, Mac!"

The transport dropped anchor off the white beach shore of a small island. Curious Marines crowded the rails and watched as natives paddled to the ship.

One of the troops bellowed to the native nearest the ship: "Hey, Mac! Where are we?"

Commission To Ask for New School

Pupils Already on Shifts at Stanton, Patterson Due to Heavy Overcrowding

To relieve overcrowding at the Patterson and Stanton Elementary Schools, the District Commissioners are expected to ask Congress for funds with which to purchase a new school building site in the vicinity of South Capitol st. and Darrington pl.

Need for the new construction site arose when War Department officials advised the Board of Education of the danger to students from airplanes at the Patterson School, Chesapeake st. and Nichols ave. sw. Heeding the warning the Board of Education abandoned plans for a new temporary school at the Patterson location and decided on the South Capitol st. site.

Pupils on Shift

Pupils at both Patterson and Stanton, as well as at Anacostia and Eastern High Schools, are attending classes in 3-hour shifts because of inadequate facilities to provide for them.

If the request for money to purchase the land is granted by Congress, it was revealed, an additional request will be made for Lanham Act moneys to pay for the erection of a new building.

Whether or not the necessary finances are obtained, a Board of Education spokesman asserted, the need for 3-hour classroom shifts will remain at the schools for some time. In addition, it was indicated that population increases before new facilities are obtained may bring even further shifting.

2000 Families Expected

Some 2000 family units are under construction in the neighborhood and will be open for occupancy in the next few months. Hundreds of additional children will enter the community, and space for them must be provided in existing schools.

Congressional action on deficiency funds for the purchase of the new site is expected to be slow despite the urgent need. If the money is obtained for the purchase of the new property, construction difficulties, too, will make it unlikely that overcrowding will be relieved during this school year.

City News in Brief

Thirty-four cases of liquor, valued at $1037.94, were stolen from the Froman Inc. wholesale liquor warehouse, 1460 Okie st. ne. in a burglary discovered at 8 a. m. yesterday, police reported. The thieves entered through a hole which had been cut in a partition between the coal shed and boiler room as part of a construction job under way at the warehouse. A padlock had been broken off to enter the coal shed.

Death Was Natural

The death of James O. Barbour, 38, of 1215 K st. nw., fatally stricken Thursday night at the Second Police Precinct Jail, was due to pneumonia and a lung abscess, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, said, following an autopsy yesterday. The victim had been placed in jail on a drunkenness charge. After being found unconscious in his cell he was taken to Sibley Hospital, where he died.

WWDC Bond Show Today

Three hours of entertainment, sponsored by the D. C. War Finance Committee to boost sales by telephone, will be broadcast over Station WWDC today at 1 p. m., when a "Treasury Radio Bond Cavalcade" will be held at the National Press Club.

Admission will be on the basis of bond purchases, and orders for subscriptions may be telephoned to WWDC. Notables from the stage, press, radio and Capitol Hill will participate, and music will be by the Army Air Forces Band and Denny Beckner's Fourteen Madcap Merrymakers.

Pistol and $200 Stolen

Stewart's drug store, 1600 U st. nw., was found broken into early yesterday and $200 and a pistol stolen. The thieves entered through an unlocked basement door and pried open a door at the top of the basement steps, police reported.

Draftee Gets 15 Months

Frederick Jackson, 18, Negro, was sentenced to 15 months' imprisonment by Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court for the looting of nine Georgetown homes while on a three-week furlough granted him September 6 following induction into the Army. Jackson resided at 1025 30th st. nw.

Capt. John R. Perry will speak on the "Navy Seabees" at the luncheon of the Washington Building Congress, Monday at 12:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. New officers will also be installed at the meeting.

Victory Sidelights

Labor Heads Apeal on Illegal Prices

The black markets in Washington will be stamped out only when the District residents make up their minds they will not tolerate them any longer, Sherwood Dodge, price executive of the local OPA, told a gathering of representatives of labor unions last night.

The meeting, in the Force school building, 1740 Massachusetts aye. nw., was attended by 30 representatives of the various labor organizations.

Home front pledge blanks, which enable a citizen to file an official oath he will not engage in black market operations, buying or selling, were distributed to be taken back to the unions.

In addition to Sherwood others on the program were Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, publicity officer, and Mrs. Charles Putnam, price panel coordinator.

Ration Book Planned

Applicants for War Ration Book 4 must present Book 3 when registering in District schools, Thursday and Friday, October 21 and 22.

This was stressed yesterday by Lawson J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of the registration. More than 100 District schools will be open to issue the new books which are to be used for sugar and processed foods after October 31.

Name of the owner, his address and his signature must be inscribed on each 3 book. Persons whose last names begin with letters from A through J should register on October 21. The others sign up the following day.

$150 Fine Coupon Penalty

Lewis G. Heiss, 23, of 1260 10th st. nw., was given a $150 fine yesterday in Municipal Court after he was found guilty of illegal possession of 35 "B," "C" and "D" gas coupons. Heiss was said to be one of four youths who peddled numerous gas coupons. The other three were juveniles. Their cases were disposed of in Juvenile Court.

Classes for Servicemen

Registration for servicemen and hostesses to enroll in modern dancing, French and Spanish classes will be conducted from 8 to 10:30 p. m. Monday and Tuesday nights at the Rebecca Rhoads Service Club, 1315 Fourth st. sw., Mrs. George Thorpe, director of the club, announced last night. Recreational programs will include a floor show Monday and an oyster supper Tuesday. The club is also open on Thursday nights.

Alfred T. Bieber Is Commended for Bravery in Action

Alfred T. Bieber, Army technician, fifth grade, 477 F st. sw., has been commended by Lieut. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commanding United States Army Forces in the South Pacific, for "outstanding conduct at Guadalcanal from January 10 to 26, 1943," headquarters in the South Pacific announced yesterday.

BIEBER

The citation said: "He displayed unusual devotion to duty and personal courage as a member of a litter squad. Working day and night over hazardous and rugged terrain, and in the face of heavy enemy machine-gun and sniper fire, he assisted in the speedy evacuation of wounded personnel to places of safety for expeditious medical treatment."

A native of southwest Washington, Bieber, who is 28, is a graduate of St. Dominic's parochial school. Before entering the Army in February, 1942, he played the drums in several night club bands, and was known as "Duke" Bieber. Trained at Camp Lee and Camp Wheeler, he had been stationed in Ohau, where he was a drummer with the Thirty-fifth Infantry band. His mother, Mrs. Grace Bieber, lives at the Southwest address.

Navy Promotes Victor Mature, Former Film Star

Victor Mature, former motion picture star, has just been promoted from boatswain's mate first class to a chief boatswain's mate in the Coast Guard, it was confirmed by the Navy yesterday. Mature is on temporary duty in Washington assisting in the Community War Fund drive.

After entering the Coast Guard in the summer of 1942 as a coxswain, Mature was on active sea duty in the North Atlantic from February to September of this year. During this period he earned his promotion to boatswain's mate first class. He assisted in the rescue of the two survivors of the Coast Guard cutter, Escanaba, recently sunk in the Atlantic.

3 Hospitals Slated to Get Materials

WPB's Government Division to Provide Equipment if Further Trouble Is Met

Adequate technical materials for the three suburban hospitals now under construction in nearby Maryland and Virginia was promised yesterday by a WPB spokesman

"If the hospitals have any difficulty in getting the needed equipment they have only to call on the WPB Government division and the matter will be adjusted as quickly as possible," the spokesman declared. (Government division was set up to handle requests from municipal, State and county governments.) It was understood that if the equipment isn't quickly available to fill the hospitals' priority order, the Government division would scour the country for the necessary items.

Delay in Completion

The Public Buildings Administration reported Thursday that the hospitals now nearly completed in Arlington County, Va.; Cheverly in Prince Georges County, and in Bethesda, Montgomery County, would be delayed in actual operation because of difficulty in obtaining such equipment as X-ray machines, cabinets, beds and special lighting facilities.

The WPB spokesman charged that the hospitals themselves were behind schedule and this, he said led to the routing of equipment originally slated for the suburban institutions to other hospitals which could put it to immediate use.

Half Million Apiece

The new hospitals are being constructed by the Public Building Administration under the Lanham Act at a cost of more than a half million dollars apiece. Each will have a normal capacity of 100 beds and an emergency capacity of 135. If they get the technical material promised by the WPB, the Arlington County Hospital is expected to be in operation before January 1, Superintendent Charles Dabbs said yesterday. It will be staffed by 50 nurses. The other two hospitals are expected to open around the same time, granted they get the mechanical equipment.

St. Paul's to Hold Mass, Service for China Tomorrow

A good-will service in Chinese and English tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 917 23d st. nw., will highlight the local commemoration of the thirty-second anniversary of the Chinese Republic's founding by the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

Dr. Wei Tao-ming, the Chinese Ambassador; Vice President Wallace and other representatives of the United Nations have been invited to the St. Paul's service. The Rev. Robert E. Wood, rector of St. Michael's and All-Angels Church in Wuchang, China, will celebrate the mass.

The Chinese Community Church will hold a special service at 3 p. m. at 1011 L st. nw., conducted by the Rev. C. C. Hung. Members of the Chinese colony and friends will hold a reception at the Chinese Embassy at 4 p. m.

Meanwhile the Most Rev. Paul Yu-pin, Vicar-Apostolic of Nanking, China, and temporarily in Washington, has requested that a special prayer for China, composed by Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, be read at all masses tomorrow in Catholic churches throughout America.

2 Restaurant Operators Lose Licenses

The District Commissioners revoked yesterday the licenses of two restaurant operators who are no longer in business, suspended five other licenses and served formal warning on an eighth operator to clean up or close up.

The decisions were reached after extensive hearings on the cases by the District License Revocation Board, acting after newspapers brought pressure for official action against Washington's many dirty restaurants. The health campaign was begun three months ago by The Washington Post.

The Commissioners decreed that, effective October 17, the licenses of Louis Goodman for 935 Pennsylvania ave. nw. and Justine M. Cole for 1418 Florida ave. ne. shall be void.

Suspensions 2 Weeks Each

However, Goodman has sold out, and the Commissioners said Cole's restaurant already has closed.

The suspensions are for 2 weeks each. They follow:

Louis, Constantine and Charles Mandes, of 314 9th st. nw.; Terry S. Gregory, 2632 14th st. nw.; James C. Wing, 622 H st. nw.; Joseph George, 1540 7th st. nw., and Harry Xeron, of 1018 14th st. nw.

The license board had recommended a suspension of 2 weeks of Charles E. Sanford, of 62-64 H st. ne., but the Commissioners changed this to a warning.

Constantine Roumel, operator of the OK Nut Co. of 1109 7th st. nw., was fined $25 by Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn. Roumel was charged with having dirty candy cases, including one in which moths and bugs were feeding on shelled nuts; dirty shelves, counters and floor, mice feces on floor, piles of junk, auto tires, kettles, pans, old clothes and crushed peanuts on floor.

Under a health department regulation, $25 is the maximum penalty for sanitation offenses by storekeepers, but in restaurant cases the maximum is $300.

Frederick Fahl of 609 15th st. nw., forfeited $50 when he failed to appear to answer charges of having dirty glasses for the use of patrons.

War Epidemics' Recurrence Held Unlikely

Despite the vagaries of Washington weather, District health officials yesterday said they expected no recurrence of pneumonia and influenza epidemics that were so prevalent during the last war.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, warned that wartime conditions made it impossible to accurately foretell the possibility of wintertime epidemics, but added that the application of modern-day public health measures had lessened the chances of them occurring by over 50 per cent.

He did, however, point out the prevalent dangers which exist for the public, chief of which he said was the overcrowding in public transportation vehicles. He urged that the transit facilities of the District be adequately ventilated and also expressed the hope that overcrowding would be avoided.

The rules laid down for the general public to observe were as follows:

Avoid overheating the home, and be certain that the body temperature does not undergo any drastic or sudden changes.

If you cough or sneeze, be sure that you do not endanger those near you.

Regulate your diet in such a way as to eliminate the possibility of intestinal difficulties.

Finally, consult your physician immediately when any physical condition arises which seems like a cold or a temperature or the early symptoms of grippe.

Burns Suffered Sept. 21 Prove Fatal ot D. C. Man

Andrew Vaughn, 59, died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital as the result of burns suffered when fire broke out in his room at 605 6th st. nw. on September 21.

Vaughn was first brought to Emergency Hospital for treatment and later transferred to Gallinger.

Girl, 20, Gets 1 to 3 Years For Bigamy

'Loved Too Many Sailors,' Declares Former Waitress; Seized in San Diego

Mrs. Grace Vivian Reinert, 20, who told reporters she "just loved too many sailors," was sentenced yesterday by Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court to one to three years' imprisonment for bigamy and an additional six to eighteen months for escaping from custody in Gallinger Hospital to go to the San Diego Naval Base.

At sentencing, the winsome waitress, who has been married to three sailors in the last two years—two of the marriages at the same time—was dressed in shabby slacks. She appeared frightened, laughing nervously once and wringing her hands.

Justice McGuire, who had seen her tell a jury that she committed a bigamous marriage only because of liquor and sympathy, shook his head as he looked at Mrs. Reinert.

"You are unfortunately the product of a broken home, easy divorce, irreligion, and pursuit of the cult of pleasure," he said. "I'm putting you away for the duration, for both the benefit of yourself and that of others."

It was indicated the blondish woman is in need of hospital treatment, and it was to this the justice referred.

Mrs. Reinert married a policeman before she was 16. He divorced her a year later. Then she travelled around the country as a waitress. In 1941, she married a sailor, who was killed at Pearl Harbor. Early in 1943, she married a machinist's mate in Washington, lived with him for six weeks and then ran away. She was back in a month to marry another sailor. Convicted in May, just because she was to be sentenced, she escaped and was picked up by police in San Diego.

Postlude

Brahms Cycle Held Large Following

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Friday night the last of eight concerts devoted to the instrumental chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, David Gillet, Jashe Veissi and Nocum Benditzki) and Frank Sheridan, piano. Program: Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 25; String Quartet in B flat major, Op. 67; Piano Quintet in F minor, Op. 34.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Coolidge Auditorium at the Library of Congress was crowded last evening for the close of the survey of Brahms' instrumental chamber music which has been in progress on Wednesdays and Fridays for four weeks. From the artistic standpoint the cycle has been highly rewarding both for those auditors who have been faithful at every concert and those who have sampled a program here and there. The performances by the Coolidge Quartet as a unit and by the individual members playing sonatas and in trios has been sensitive, intelligent and concordant. In six of the concerts that admirable pianist, Frank Sheridan, was an invaluable coadjutor, and excellent work was done by the other assisting artists: Simeon Bellisen, clarinet; Weldon Wilber, horn; Carlton Cooley, viola, and Sterling Hunkins, violoncello.

BROWN

The value of the series has been what mathematicians call a variable quantity, since no two auditors have derived precisely the same satisfaction from steady application to one composer. Those encountering the totality of his chamber music for the first time must have been impressed by its fine workmanship and its remarkable consistency in wholesome beauty. Those renewing acquaintance with favorite works and meeting some unfamiliar ones have enjoyed the experience of eloquent interpretations. The average auditor has learned something new about Brahms as a poet and a thinker, while for the very small minority whose professional duty it is to listen to Brahms year in and year out, it has not been an undiluted pleasure.

One definite impression left by the concerts has been that of Brahms as a conserver of the best elements of romanticism. He repudiated extravagance and flamboyance, exaggeration and histrionic emphasis, and charged his music with a sober and sincere emotion which is closely identified with religious feeling. He made the everyday things of life glow with a peculiar intensity, and his philosophical place as a tone-poet in somewhere between Wordsworth and Browning.

Percy E. Taylor, District Jeweler, Dies in Florida

Percy Echols Taylor, 57, Washington jeweler, died of a heart ailment Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. David S. Miller, in Tampa, Fla., it was learned here yesterday.

Born in Staunton, Va., Mr. Taylor moved to Washington as a youth and was employed by Shaw & Brown, jewelers. In 1916 he formed with the late Edward Ayre the jewelry firm of Ayre & Taylor. Located in the Woodward Building, the firm later moved to its present address at 1209 Connecticut ave. nw. Mr. Ayre withdrew in 1933.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, who made their home at 1406 Hamilton st. nw., went to Florida two weeks ago to improve his health.

Besides his wife and daughter, he is survived by a son, William Warren Taylor, an Army aviation cadet, and a brother, Norman S. Taylor, of Columbus, Ohio.

L. J. Collins Dies; Funeral in Mass.

Lawrence J. Collins, 70, retired restaurant proprietor, died yesterday at his home, 5736 Sherrier pl. nw., after a brief illness.

Born in Ireland, Mr. Collins moved to this country as a young man. He first lived in Kingston, Mass., and later operated a restaurant for a number of years in New York City. Afer his retirement, he moved here 20 years ago and made his home with a daughter, Mrs. Fay Eakle.

Denial Issued On Garage Lease Fee

No $6500 Sum Paid, Says Official Of FWA in Reply To Langer's Charge

Charges that the Federal Works Agency had paid an attorney $6500 to draw the lease for the old Capital Garage building at 1320 New York ave. nw. were denied yesterday by Ernest E. Hall, executive officer of the FWA.

In a written statement, Hall denied the charge which had been made earlier in the week by Senator William Langer (Republican) of North Dakota.

Hall also said that the footage specifications in the lease excluded a barber shop there from governmental control.

Further, he said the garage is steadily filling and that 181 cars were garaged there on Thursday night.

In the meantime, Joseph B. Schaaff, president of the National Mortgage & Investment Co., also released a statement for publication in which he asserted that a letter of confirmation, given his firm by the FWA prior to the signing of the contract, expressly excluded the barber shop from Government control.

At the same time a representative of the Byrd Economy Committee reiterated the assertion that the lease itself failed to exclude the shop.

Schaaff said further that the idea back of the Government lease is a sound one and that with a little cooperation on the part of other Government agencies, it could result in a decided saving of taxpayers' money.

Arlington Man Killed in Crash On War Duty

Jesse E. Floyd of 4822 North 13th st., Arlington, reconnaissance engineer on duty with the War Department, was killed September 25 in an airplane crash at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, according to word received by his relatives.

MR. FLOYD

At the time of his death, Mr. Floyd was traveling for the War Department as an industrial traffic engineer in the rail division of the Transportation Corps, Office of the Quartermaster General.

Mr. Floyd, who would have been 68 this month, had been with the War Department as a civilian employe since July, 1941, when he resigned as transportation consultant to Ralph Budd, transportation commissioner to the Council of National Defense.

Although his duties as a locating and construction engineer for a number of railroads carried him all over the country, he had made his home in Arlington County since 1935.

Born in Greensfork, Ind., he attended Purdue University and later worked in a number of capacities. He was well known in the transportation industry for his reports on railroad evaluation and traffic.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter Mrs. Paul M. Schmick of Washington, and one brother, Horace Floyd of Burgin, Ky.

Brig. Gen. Powell Of Stilwell's Staff Dies in Orient

Brig. Gen. William D. Powell of the staff of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of American forces in the China-Burma-India theater, died at his post, October 6, of cerebral hemorrhage, the Army announced yesterday.

General Powell, who had served on Stilwell's staff since January, 1942, was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in 1917. During his Army career since then, he saw action in the First World War and was with the Army of Occupation in Germany. He also served in the Philippines.

Heart Attack Fatal To John Holzwart

John Holzwart, 64, an employe of the Capital Transit Co., died yesterday in the office of a local physician after a month's illness. Mr. Holzwart was stricken with pneumonia a few weeks ago but had been convalescing until a heart attack yesterday.

Born in Austria, he came to Washington as a boy. His home here was at 18 14th st ne. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Matilda Holzwart; two daughters, Mrs. Robert Thompson and Mrs. Robert King, of Washington; and a son, Pvt. John Holzwart, in the Army.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Quality of Mercy

Every time she saw one of those headlines she flinched . . . "Bombers Again Hammer Frankfurt" . . . "Fortresses Dump Loads on Rhine Cities" . . . "Strategists Say Tokio Can Be Devastated." Then there were the photographs of returning bomber crews, young, fresh faced, smiling boys back from their missions of death.

Oh, yes, it was all a part of war, she knew. And had not just as deadly bombs been dropped on Coventry and London? Would they not just as readily be dropped on American cities . . . New York? . . . Washington? And besides there were all those suffering, persecuted peoples of Europe to remember . . . And the crime of Lidice . . . And the terrors of Naples . . . And the atrocities in Japanese prison camps.

Nevertheless it made her feel guilty. Well, that was part of war too—to do degrading things as well as to suffer them. Part of the punishment for having selfishly slept and let the world drift back to the jungle. There was nothing to do now of course but fight to survive, and pray that one would not become too brutalized in the process.

Soldiers of course learned to fight coldly and grimly. In time it became a machinelike business with them, she supposed. But those at home, what would it do to them? To Americans, a people noted for generosity and compassion? What would it do to her, a woman? Would it dull her sensitiveness, chill her kindliness, befog her understanding?

Turning the pages of the newspaper away from the bombings, the words, "Food Plans for War Victims" caught her eye. Arrangements were being made, said the news story, to send the starving peoples of Europe compressed foods that would not only rebuild their bodies but gratify their tastes. Italians were to have their traditional macaroni, enforced with protein and vitamins. Countries in Southern Europe accustomed to milk soups were to have dehydrated soups, high in protein, and made with dried skim milk and plenty of seasoning. Peoples whose traditional soups had meat bases were to have a dehydrated vegetable stew. She smiled to herself happily at the thought of this consideration—that food should be appetizing to those who had suffered so much.

Her eye moved on to another headline, one that told of a request to Congress to take "vigorous action" at once to feed the starving children of Europe's occupied countries. Another told of the work of the International Red Cross in supervising the feeding of the hungry in Greece.

Memories rushed over her. Scenes in news films and photographs . . . gaunt old men and women stretching out bony hands in bread lines, anguished faced women with mummy-like babies in their arms waiting their turns for soup dipped out of a huge, dirty looking kettle, partly dressed children with ribs showing in their scrawny bodies. Lines and crowds of frightened, hopeless people, tightly grasping their meager food rations, passed before her.

Behind them came the invalids, emaciated and hobbling on canes. Then the insane with haunted, terrified faces clutching for their food. Last of all, and keeping their proper distance behind the others, came the Jews, eternal people of sorrow, moving slowly and hesitantly, lifting tragic sunken eyes from their skeleton-like faces.

Yes, these were the people who were going to be fed, even warmed and clothed she reflected. And America was having a part in it. She was having a part in it—yes, when she ate her bread without butter, when she wore a sweater in a chilly house, when she made any of her infinitesimal sacrifices of wartime. Yes, we were dropping bombs of death but we were also sending the bread of life, and we were sending it with thoughtfulness and understanding, and in the way it would be appealing to long starved people with weakened bodies.

She suddenly felt warm and expanded inside and at peace with herself. She and all America were giving life as well as taking it. Perhaps it would expiate—in a way—for this other terrible thing they had to do.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Looks as if the stately old Washington Club will hum with activity this season. All this week committee chairmen met to map the fall program, which will include Monday morning book chats and Tuesday morning lectures featuring authoritative speakers. Then there will be dinner meetings, a few parties and plenty of wartime projects.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In the meantime Mrs. Ernest F. Sappington, chairman of the admissions committee, still is receiving nominations for membership. Tuesday is the dead line for nominations. From all reports, there will be a long list of nominations for the committee's consideration and members are urged to get the nominations in immediately so that their friends may be passed on at Tuesday's meeting so as to have the benefit of the fall club season.

First of the book reviews on schedule is arranged for Monday, November 2, at which time Mrs. Albert W. Atwood will review "The World of Yesterday," by Stefan Zweig.

Senator Brewster of Maine, who recently returned from a tour of the battle fronts, will be guest speaker of the club on November 2.

Next Thursday Mrs. S. Percy Thompson will hold a meeting of the library committee. Purpose of the get-together is to purchase new books. While the club's activities were disbanded during the summer, the library remained open. More than 150 books have been contributed to the Victory Book Campaign and the American Merchant Marine Library Asosciation.

HOOK AND NEEDLE ACCESSORIES

By Ruth Gregory

This is one time when women who know how to do things with their hands have it all over their unskilled sisters. The woman who's handy with the crochet hook and the knitting needles can have an enviable accessory wardrobe in spite of wartime shortages and spending money transferred to bonds and income taxes.

Look at these charming crocheted sets. If you were to buy them in the stores, they'd set you back plenty. And even if you were able to afford them, you couldn't find them. These are individual patterns, designed for nimble-fingered women with an eye to beauty and variety in costume.

If you're already a mistress of the needle, you'll be able to turn out either of these sets in a jiffy. If you're not, we suggest that you hie yourself to the nearest knitting bar (most of the large department stores in town have such sections operated for your convenience, where you can get instruction without cost), and learn the ins and outs of this fascinating art.

No need to moan if you can't manage a glitter bag and hat (and this year "all that glitters is gold" out of your pocket) for evening wear. Not when you can fashion an ensemble like this sequined muff and pompadour-brim calot for very few dollars. Make it out of cotton rug yarn, chenille, or knitting worsted, and in any color that pleases your fancy (wide color choice in the stores).

This white pancake beret with matching gloves is similarly easy and quick to make and very inexpensive. We liked these gloves especially because of the flared crochet cuffs—they look like dress gloves, not like the usual mitten knits. This set is equally good in colors, of course.

If you'd like to have instruction sheets for either or both of these patterns just send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me, care of The Washington Post. Ask for No. 1320 if it's the calot and pocketbook muff you want, and No. 1351 if it's the beret and gloves.

MAKE IT DO . . .

Take Care Of Your Iron

Are you a Simon Legree with your ironing equipment? Time was when you could drop it on the floor, overheat it to the burning point or let the ironing cord tangle itself into the most intricate of knots. When it had taken all the mistreatment it could stand, well, there were plenty of other irons in the stores.

Today the iron you now own must last the duration. And it will, too, if you give it the proper care. Here are a few suggestions.

Attach the plug to the iron before you connect the plug to the wall outlet. If the iron plug is connected first, then you won't have sparkles which destroy the metal of the iron terminals. It's also preferable to plug the iron into a wall outlet instead of a light socket on a drop cord. The drop cord isn't built to carry the current necessary to heat an iron. When you disconnect the cord, take hold of the plug, not the cord. Don't let the iron cord touch the hot iron or rub on the edge of the board, as this wears off the insulation.

The Gremlins:

OVERHEATING: This is one of the enemies of an electric iron. Not only is overheating hard on the insides of the iron, but it wastes electric current and is a fire hazard.

FALLS: Always be sure that the ironing board is secure and place the iron down carefully. If the iron takes a hard fall on the floor something inside may break or the ironing surface may be chipped. Of course, if it lands on a foot all may be saved—except the foot.

Keep It Clean

Once a month wax the ironing surface with paraffin. Use just a small amount while the ironing surface is warm and wipe off the excess. You can remove starch spots with an almost dry cloth or a mild scouring powder.

If the iron sticks to starched clothes, rub the surface on a little salt.

Make It Easy—

A way to save current and time, too, is to separate the laundry into rayons, cottons and woolens. That is, put together the articles that are to be ironed with a hot iron. Sprinkle clothes evenly with a sprinkler top that can be inserted in a bottle. Use warm water.

Don't iron over buttons, hooks, zippers, or any hard article that may injure the sole plate of the iron.

Market Report

Menu planning and shopping is becoming easier now with supplies of fresh fruits and vegetables in the Washington wholesale market increasing. The scarcity of oranges persists, however, with no reinforcements since Thursday night when two carloads arrived from California. The War Food Administration reports that the following foods will be available today.

Plentiful—Sweet potatoes, acorn and Hubbard squash, white potatoes, tomatoes, snap beans, cauliflower, celery, spinach, kale, collards, turnip greens, mustard greens, sweet peppers, radishes, beets, turnips, rutabaga, onions, apples, cantaloupes, limes, lemons, honeydew melons and Western grapes.

Moderate—Broccoli, cabbage, chicory, escarole, eggplant, carrots, mushrooms, parsnips, parsley, iceberg and Big Boston lettuce, romaine and avocados.

Light—Corn, cranberries, lima beans, cucumbers, salsify, celery cabbage, leeks, oranges, pears, plums, prunes, peaches, quince, Cranshaw melons, casabas, Oriental persimmons and pineapple.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

All babies cry. How much they cry depends largely on the way they are fed and cared for. When the parents relate proudly, "We hardly know there is a baby in the house, "one may be pretty certain that digestively this baby is on the top rung. It isn't happenstance that a well-filled tummy is so closely related to a sweet disposition.

Several times lately we have deplored the tendency of new parents to ignore the crying baby. It isn't the baby's fault that his nourishment is ill-suited or inadequate for him. The least a parent can do is to make him comfortable until it is. Allowing him to "cry it out" is a thoughtless if not a cruel practice.

Mrs. E. J. B. writes, "Several years ago I lived in a home where the parents were addicted to letting the baby cry it out. Night after night was made miserable listening to that baby cry himself to sleep.

"When my baby was born I didn't want to spoil him, neither did I want a crying baby. We started letting him cry until he sobbed, then picking him up. But he was already nervous and could not get to sleep. Then I started picking him up the moment he started to cry. I would hold him quietly for five or ten minutes, talking to him in quiet tones. Then, sure that he was dry, I would put him back to bed. In a moment he would be asleep.

"Now he is five months old and is unbelievably good and happy. He weighs more than 17 pounds. He has recently learned to yell loudly and he loves doing it. He seldom cries at bedtimes, though he sometimes talks to himself. Maybe he is an ordinary baby, but he seems very special to us. I know he is not spoiled."

How much better to pick up the baby, patting up any stray pangs of gas, soothing him, changing his position, without being fearful he'll stay awake for more attention. The contented baby wants to go to sleep, a fact few parents recognize.

I'm happy to have an illustration proving that to give a crying baby attention will not ruin him forever.

Our leaflet, "The First Six Weeks," helps to set the baby off on the usual early schedules. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

There is a 2-inch difference between dress sizes. If you could but can't slip into a nifty 36—you now definitely require a 38—this is about the fix you are in: Your weight is up 10 or so pounds and your waist, bust and hips have all spread about 2 inches.

Things may not have gone that far. You may still be able to work into your regular size. In that case, you have probably taken on a trifling 4 or 5 pounds and expanded around an inch through the measurements.

But you see these buxom matrons who are 50 to 75 pounds overweight? Well, they all start with 5 or 10 pounds extra—not enough to bother about! Whether your broadening makes you a full size or merely a half size over your quota, you don't have to make much of an alteration provided you get at it. The time is now.

Ten pounds of overweight doesn't call for a diet. It calls for a slight change in your food habits. Perhaps it is that extra slice of bread or a high starch dinner, finished off with a too-rich dessert. That is, too rich for your weight. When you have a main course like spaghetti and cheese, always limit the bread to one slice, or maybe none, and take fruit for dessert. There you have a much better balanced meal for fewer calories. The trouble-maker may be jam or marmalade for your breakfast toast. Or, you may be falling for too many desserts for lunch. Just ask yourself which you would rather have, a chocolate cream puff or no puff around your waist.

If your weight is only up 5 pounds, you don't have to do much about your food habits beyond checking into them to see that you are getting the right nutrition. Probably what you need to do is cut down on the between-meal and bedtime snacks. If you will exert a little will power for one single week, this will come easy. Habit is a fine thing when you use it for weight control.

But in any case, straining at the seams means you are due for toning up. The lack of muscle tone is what lets you spread. It isn't hard to spot where you need exercise. The place where your new frock has to be let out tells you that. If your figure runs true to form, however, you probably need to nip in the waist and smooth down through the hips.

To peel the excess inches off the waist, sit on floor, legs wide apart, back straight and hands on hips. Pull up strongly with the lower adbominal muscles, use the waist as a pivot, and circle to the side, down, around and up.

Gingham Can Help Make an Old Room Look New

By Martha Ellyn

Home decorating will have to be done with wartime eyes this fall. Redecorating for the pleasure of a change is out. To cooperate with WPB's office of civilian requirements, there should be no unnecessary buying.

But there does come a time in every room's life when it needs some touching up, not necessarily for decor but for utility.

If you are a bit disgruntled, concerning your home background, just pause and consider if you may not have over looked some possibilities of changes, without unbalancing the budget. Perhaps right under your nose there may be hovering the ingredients for a dramatic room—if used well.

Let's consider a hypothetical case. A one-room apartment is your domain. Here you eat, entertain, study and sleep. You have a studio couch with none too attractive a covering. The big overstuffed chair is holding up beautifully as to springs, but its frock is a bit shabby. You eat at a card table. Your desk is also your dressing table. You are blessed with adequate windows, but the treatment of them is not an inspiration.

What can you do to make the room radiate color and vitality? The best idea is to make it easy to live in and yet be completely sane as to the doing over. Make it over painlessly.

Color may be the answer. Color can quickly transform a room with little trouble. Bright, crisp fabrics will give your morale a lift. And don't be afraid to experiment with color schemes. Combine pink with green if you have always longed to do so. Dare to be different if it is red and white that pleases your fancy. There are ginghams, sail cloth, cretonnes, challies and other inexpensive materials that can transform the davenport, the easy chair and the windows. It is well to keep an eye on the materials that will launder easily and successfully.

Plaid gingham can do much to effect a pleasing transformation. In the one-room apartment pictured here, this material in red and green has been used to cover studio couch, easy chair and desk seat. The draperies are of plain cotton material of the same green as in the gingham. With a little thought and manipulation most any one can be a home-making magician and make the furnishings they have do until better days are here again

On this page is shown a one-room apartment which used the gingham formula for the transformation. The studio couch was turned into an attractive piece by green and red plaid gingham. Ends were made and covered with gingham on the inside and plain material on the outside. The easy chair was given the gingham treatment as was the seat for the desk-dressing table combination. Plain green draperies, matching the green of the plaid gingham, give a pleasing effect. The end table lamps were made from old pottery jars by means of electric adaptors. White shades were used because they reflect the greatest amount of light.

Plan wisely, executive cleverly and show the world what a wise and thoroughly creative ability you have employed in making yourself a cheerful spot in which to live.

Plaintive Strains of 'Kol Nidre' Usher In Yom Kippur Rites

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

The "Kol Nidre" (all vows) prayer, redolent with the pain of Jewish tribulation from Pharaoh to Hitler, last night sounded in synagogue and temple, as Yom Kippur —Day of Atonement—came with the Jewish Sabbath that began at sundown.

Soft strains of the old melody, whose origin is steeped in antiquity, were intoned by thousands of the faithful in this wartime Capital on the Potomac, and will be said at numerous services until today at sunset.

Christian Gestures

In contrast to the racial hatred and tryanny of Naziland, Christians of Washington reached out the hand of brotherhood to their Jewish brethren.

The Washington Ministerial Union sent Yom Kippur greetings to the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) congregation, and the First Congregational Church here and the Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church turned over their building facilities to the Washington Hebrew congregation and the Arlington Jewish Community Center, respectively, because of overcrowded Jewish worship quarters.

Meanwhile, 6000 Christian Churches have designated tomorrow as a day of intercession and compassion for Jewish brethren suffering under the Nazi yoke of tyranny and brutality. And the common appeal of the Community War Fund will be mentioned by rabbis at Yom Kippur services today.

"Between Two Worlds"

More than 1000 Jewish men and women in uniform went last night to services at the Jewish Community Center USO, arranged by the Army and Navy committee of the Jewish Welfare Board. Another program is set for today at 10 a. m. The annual Yom Kippur dance will take place at the center tonight.

Typical of the Yom Kippur sermons heard last night was the one delivered by Rabbi Harry Silverstone, spiritual leader of Tifereth Israel Congregation, 14th and Euclid sts. nw.

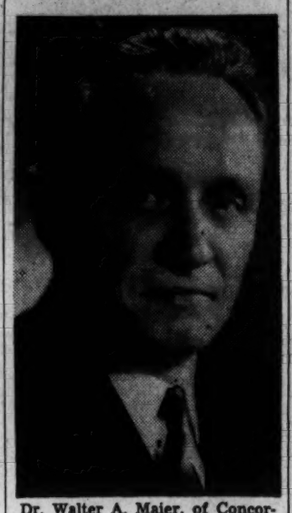
"This year is unlike any in our lifetime," he said, "for as Americans and as Jews, we stand between two worlds—the one that is surely dying with all its hatred and horror, its destruction and its death, and the other that is being born, with all its vigor and vision, its liberty and its light, its confidence in man and its faith in God."

Services Today

Yom Kippur services for Jewish civilian and military personnel will be held in the Signal Corps Auditorium of the Pentagon today from 10:30 a. m. to 12 p. m., and from 5 to 6 p. m. Chaplain Arych Lev of the Army Chief of Chaplains' Office will be in charge.

Dr. Julius Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, will preach today at 10:30 a. m. at the Washington Hebrew Temple, and at 4 p. m. at memorial (Yiskor) services at First Congregational Church. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld will preach today at 10:30 a. m. at First Church, and at 4 p. m. at the Temple.

Dr. Maier Returns To Air Tomorrow



Dr. Walter A. Maier, of Concordia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, will return to the Mutual network tomorrow for the eleventh consecutive season of the International Lutheran Hour.

2 Christian Living Schools Continue Tomorrow Night

Two Methodist young adult schools of Christian living will hold their second weekly sessions tomorrow night.

They will be at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, 1st st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. Both groups will have fellowship hours from 6 to 7 p. m., class periods from 7 to 8 p. m., and worship programs from 8 to 9 p. m.

Principal speaker at the Rhode Island ave. worship service will be Osborne Hauge of the Norwegian Embassy speaking on "The Struggle of the Norwegian Church Against Nazism." The Mount Vernon group will offer courses on race relations, courtship and marriage, public speaking, postwar problems and other subjects.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Church, will speak at 8 p. m. on "Problems of Juvenile Delinquency."

G. W. Students Hear First of 12 Services

George Washington University students were addressed yesterday by President Cloyd H. Marvin at the first of a series of 12 chapel services arranged for the current school terms.

The university president pointed out that the chapel services are designed to encourage the "growth of religious insight and for the realization of spiritual fellowship" among students and faculty alike. Director of the George Washington chapel is Dr. Burnice Herman Jarman, associate professor of education.

Outstanding Washington clergymen of all faiths will speak before the student body at these services, held each Friday from 12:10 to 12:30 p. m. in the west room of the Columbian House. Parents of students and friends of the university are invited to attend.

Speakers for the present semester will include: October 15, Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church; October 22, Dr. J. Warren Hastings of National City Christian Church; October 29, the Rev. Charles Stewart McKenzie, Western Presbyterian Church; November 5, memorial services for Carl Douglas Wells, arranged by university faculty colleagues; November 12, Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, Church of the Epiphany; November 19, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfield of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; December 3, Dr. Howard Stone Anderson of First Congregational Church; December 10, Dr. John W. Rustin of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; December 17, Christmas Music Service by the George Washington University Glee Clubs; January 7, the Rev. Andrew R. Bird, Church of the Pilgrims; January 14, Dr. James Edward Pruden of First Baptist Church.

Three Leaders To Discuss Race

An amity meeting will be held tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I st. nw., with leaders of three faiths participating.

Thomas N. Roberts, assistant to the director of personnel, Department of Agriculture, will discuss "The Negro and Race Unity;" Mrs. Raphael Turover, national vice president of the Hadassah, "The Jew and Race Unity," and Philip A. Marangella, Government auditor and lecturer, "The Baha'i Answer to Race Unity."

Baptist Students Support Revival

'Echo' Meeting Scheduled Monday

A meeting "echoing" the recent Westminster Conference of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association will take place Monday at 8 p.m. at Epworth Methodist Church, 13th and North Carolina ave. ne.

William Mauger and Harold S. King will show films of the Easter sunrise services and the Westminster Conference, respectively. New association officers will be installed.

Chevy Chase Church Adds Assistant

The Rev. Donald L. Leonard has joined the staff of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church as assistant minister in charge of religious education.

He comes from the First Congregational Church of West Haven, Conn., where he served two years while completing studies for the Doctor of Divinity degree at Yale Divinity School.

His earlier training was at Washington University, St. Louis; the McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, and Texas Christian University.

Episcopal Canteen Will Open Saturday

A large new church-sponsored servicemen's canteen will open Saturday in the parish hall of Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G st. nw., under the auspices of the Washington Episcopal Diocese. It will be known as "The Episcopal Canteen."

The facilities, open to men and women of the United Nations' armed forces will include entertainment, recreation, refreshments, reading and writing rooms.

Announcement of the new project was made yesterday by Douglas S. Brinkley, chairman of the executive committee of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Potomac Assembly.

"Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany, has been most kind in permitting the use of his church for this project," commented Brinkley.

Society Will Meet

The Woman's Missionary Society of Calvary Baptist Church will meet Wednesday morning to discuss "Our Hope in National Christian Leaders."

"NOW THE DAY IS OVER"
S. BARING-GOULD

Now the day is over,
Night is drawing nigh;
Shadows of the evening
Steal across the sky.
Jesus, give the weary
Calm and sweet repose;
With Thy tend'rest blessing
May our eyelids close.
"Little Stories" of GREAT HYMNS

This soothing evening hymn was written by the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould for his Sunday School children. It was inspired by the verse from the Book of Proverbs, "When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid, yea, thou shalt lie down and thy sleep shall be sweet."

General's Wife to Have One-Man Art Exhibit

The sculptured works of a talented Capital artist—an Army wife—will be on display tomorrow here when Dorothea Greenbaum's one-man show opens at the Whyte Gallery.

The 4 to 6 o'clock opening will draw a number of uniformed spectators and their wives, for the sculptor is the wife of Gen. Edward S. Greenbaum, on duty here in the office of the Undersecretary of War. Before taking his military job, General Greenbaum was a partner in the New York law firm of Greenbaum, Wolf & Ernst.

A group of drawings will be in the exhibit, as well as 18 small sculptures, 1 of them lent by the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry S. Morgenthau, jr. The bronze statue, "David," which is on display, won the Western Hemisphere Purchase Prize of the International Business Machines Corp. and was shown at the National Art Week Exhibition in Washington at the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

Born in Brooklyn, Dorothea Greenbaum began her art studies with Kenneth Hayes Miller, first at the New York School of Fine Art and Applied Design and later at the Arts Students League. Her interest in sculpture began in 1927, in which year the Whitney Studio Club exhibited her "Sleeping Girl." Her first one-man show was held at the Weyhe Gallery, New York, in 1934, at which gallery she had a second show in 1939.

Other exhibitions of her work were held at the San Francisco Museum of Art last year and in the Lawrence Museum of Williams College this year. She was awarded the George Widener Memorial Medal at the Pennsylvania Academy of Art in 1941 and the Medal for Sculpture at the Corcoran Gallery the same year.

Mrs. Greenbaum was one of the founders of the Sculptors' Guild and is a member of the National Society of Sculptors, the Washington Artists Guild and the Washington Society of Artists.

R. A. Vickreys To Return Tomorrow

Underwood & Underwood.
Mrs. Richard Allen Vickrey.

To return to Washington tomorrow from the Pocono Mountains, where they spent their honeymoon, are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Allen Vickrey, who were married here last Saturday evening. The wedding ceremony took place at 7 o'clock at the Metropolitan Memorial Church, with the Rev. Edward Gardiner Latch officiating.

The bride, the former Miss Betty Bowdoin Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wanton Wheeler, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin with sweetheart neckline, long, pointed sleeves, a fitted waist and circular skirt and train. Her two-tiered illusion veil was held in place with seed pearls and her bouquet was of white roses and stephanotis.

Miss Elizabeth McNair, wearing a gown of dusty rose faille and carrying a bouquet of chrysanthemums, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids, in gowns of turquoise faille and carrying yellow chrysanthemums, were Miss Janet Wheeler and Miss Jean Wheeler of Baltimore, Miss Marion Gantt of Evergreen, Ala.; Miss Novella Capps, Miss Harriet Cook and Miss Westray Boyce. Lieut. Roger Magee was best man. A reception at the Wheeler home followed the ceremony.

The bride attended Gunston Hall and St. Margaret's School. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen M. Vickrey of Brookdale, Md., attended Pennsylvania State College and is stationed with the Navy Department here.

Gloria Plaugher Becomes Bride In Virginia Rites

Sergt. Conway M. Anderson and his bride, the former Miss Gloria Louise Plaugher, will make their home in Franconia, Va., following a wedding trip in the Northern States. Their wedding took place Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Pohick Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ward G. Plaugher of Franconia, wore a gown of ivory satin with sweetheart neckline, long circular train and full-length tulle veil, trimmed in seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried white roses and stephanotis. Mrs. David Anderson of Arlington was the matron of honor. She wore a gown of yellow taffeta and carried a bouquet of talisman roses. Other attendants were Miss Lorraine Mundy, Miss Carolyn Rice, Miss Ann Violett and Miss Hilda Penn, bridesmaids, and Miss Betty Jean Plaugher, junior bridesmaid.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Conway M. Anderson of Front Royal, Va., had as his best man Henry Chesire of Alexandria. William Higham, David Anderson, Sergt. Richard Silver, Sergt. Amedale Buba, Sergt. Francis X. Murphy and Sergt. Joseph Ackerman were ushers.

British Officer To Marry Today

The marriage of Miss Helen Rawes Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Johnson of Chestnut Hill, Pa., and Maj. R. Donald McLeod, M. C., Royal Engineers, attached to the British Army Staff in Washington, will take place this afternoon at 5 o'clock in St. Thomas Church, Whitemarsh, Pa. Dr. Nathaniel B. Groton will officiate.

Miss Louisa Johnson will be her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, and Captain Germel of the Royal Engineers, will serve as best man.

Mrs. Duell Gives U. S. New Invention

By Marie McNair

"It's more of a pleasure to try to be useful than to seek personal glory," said Mrs. Charles H. Duell, when asked about her newest invention on her now-famous pill box, in use by millions of men in the armed forces.

And with an engaging modesty pretty Edith Brisbane Duell told of her accomplishment, developed from a stray thought, and now saving the lives of countless men on the fighting fronts. Her latest invention, along the same lines as the original, was designed to accommodate the administration of the new drug—sulphadiazine.

The original box, fashioned of tin, square in shape, which features the control dose and single operation principle, contained a dozen sulphanilimide tablets. When the priorities flag went up on tin, and the new drug was put in widespread use, the Army called on Mrs. Duell to help them out. They wanted a box which could release two capsules instead of one; all oblong in shape instead of square, and they wanted it designed of a product to which priorities could lay no claim.

Box Wrapped in Gas-Proof Case

Mrs. Duell didn't fail them. The box, of cardboard, long and narrow in shape, with a thumb-wide panel of emery board on the lower side, wrapped in a gas-proof, waterproof, cellophane and lead composition, is being delivered now to the boys in every American theater of war. The purpose of the roughened side is to enable the men to retain a firm hold on the box while manipulating the release of the capsules—a single operation which may be worked from either end.

Most of the summer Mrs. Duell was in Detroit, where she and her husband, a noted patent lawyer, have been keeping an eye on their offices and working on further inventions to be produced after the war. Right now, there is the control medicine bottle under process of application, whereby one teaspoon of liquid may be administered at a time—a great boon to those afflicted with blindness.

Won Prize at Columbia University

In between times, when she's not of an inventive turn of mind, Edith Duell writes poetry. She received a prize for her verse from Columbia University a year or two back, and she has never gotten over the surprise. Her latest bit was published in the Polish Review, a magazine published in New York dealing with the activities of the Polish people both here and abroad. Called "The Captive" the author has inscribed the lines on a heavy cream-tinted card with the Polish eagle engraved at the top, which some of her friends are fortunate enough to receive. From her gifted pen have come these words:

O noble bird of solitary places
We know thy longing to be free
Pressed by strange and curious faces
Hateful bars surround thee
How escape this torturous bondage
Where find peace that freedom brings
To smooth thy ruffled plumage
Let grow thy aching wings.

Purely Personal

The Greek Ambassador, Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, returned yesterday from New York.

Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings have come into town from their farm at Oakington, Md., and are at the Wardman Park for the winter.

The Finnish Minister, Hjalmar J. Procope, plans to go to Cascade Inn in Virginia this weekend to join Mme. Procope, who has been there for the summer with her children, Johnan and Marietta. The Minister and his family will return to the legation on Tuesday.

The Australian Minister, Sir Owen Dixon, and Lady Dixon, will have as their guests at the legation on Monday and Tuesday, the Australian High Commissioner, Sir William Glasgow, and Lady Glasgow, who are on a trip through the Eastern States.

Mrs. William Wyman has gone to The Plains, Va., for the month of October. She is the house-guest of Mrs. John S. Rawlings.

Mrs. David M. Barkley, who is here from Randolph Field, Tex., as the house guest of her parents-in-law, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, was the guest of honor at an informal "after 6" party yesterday at which Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, were hostesses. The visitor's social schedule is contingent on her forthcoming trip to New York.

Mrs. Scott D. Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., now of Washington, and Mrs. William H. Goodacre of Oxon Hill, Md., are spending some time with their niece, Mrs. Southgate Morison, at her home, Redgate, in Virginia. Mrs. Morison entertained at dinner on Wednesday evening in honor of her guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil J. Wilkinson of Wesley Heights have as their house guest, their daughter, Mrs. William Wallace Swanson, of El Dorado, Ark., who, before her marriage a year ago, was Miss Virginia Wilkinson.

Mrs. J. Welles Henderson, jr., will arrive from Fayetteville, N. C., on Monday to visit her father, William H. Lipscomb, and her brother, Ross Lipscomb, at their home, Raspberry Plain, near Leesburg, Va.

Mrs. Robert Gries of Cleveland, Ohio, is in Washington for several weeks and has joined Captain Gries at the Shoreham.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Marks, jr., of Woodmere, Long Island, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Marks, at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Charles A. Mason and her sister-in-law, Miss Rita Mason of Chevy Chase, Md., are in New York, where they will spend the fall months at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Mme. Wei Hostess At Informal Tea

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, entertained at another in her series of informal "at homes" yesterday after 5 o'clock at the Chinese Embassy on Woodley Road. The party was in honor of Mrs. Henry F. Grady, of San Francisco.

At Twin Oakes tomorrow, Dr. Wei Tao-ming and his energetic wife will hold open house for the Capital's Chinese colony in honor of the independence day of China. No invitations have been sent out for the event, which will be celebrated with wartime simplicity.

Major Ward Entertains For Officers

A group of convalescent officers from Walter Reed Hospital were taken on a tour of Washington yesterday by members of the American Women's Hospitals Reserve Corps.

First stop on the day's schedule was at the Capitol, where the boys lunched in the Senate dining room and were greeted informally by Senator Robert Reynolds and by the recently returned world travelers, Senators Chandler, Lodge, Meade, Brewster and Russell. Following luncheon the group adjourned to the Senate gallery for a close-up of the lawmakers at work.

After brief visits to the Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson monuments, the officers were taken to the home of Maj. Dorothy Lee Ward, director of the corps, where a tea was in progress honoring members of the Home Nursing Division and their instructor, Mrs. Parker West. Present at the tea also were AWHRC officers recently commissioned by Col. Luvia Willard, national director, during her recent inspection of the Washington unit. They included First Lieut. Jane Dixon Wells and Second Lieuts. Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mrs. Royce Powell, Mrs. Corinne Phelps, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Edward Treglown and Mrs. Ethel Gearhart.

Miss Hamilton Is Engaged to Naval Ensign

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton, jr., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian Hamilton, to John Dormer Cannon, ensign URNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cannon of New York City and Salisbury, Conn. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Hamilton was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Noroton, Conn., and was presented in Washington at a tea given by her parents in their home in the fall of 1941. She is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton, long prominent in resident circles of Washington, and is the fourth generation of her family to be born in the District of Columbia. Her maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hamilton of Omaha.

The prospective bridegroom was graduated from the Hotchkiss School and with the class of 1944 from Yale University in May of this year, when he received his commission from the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps. He now is on active duty with the fleet.

Miss Naomi Glenn Campbell Bride of Ensign T. F. White

Rites Take Place At Cathedral In Dallas

An out-of-town wedding of wide interest here took place yesterday in Dallas, Tex., when Miss Naomi Glenn Campbell became the bride of Ensign Thomas Franklin White.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Arthur Campbell of this city and Tulsa, Okla. Ensign White is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy White of Williamson, W. Va. Their marriage took place in St. Matthew's Cathedral at 8 o'clock, with the Rev. Miller B. Sale officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with seed pearls and cut on empire lines. Her train-length veil was held with a coronet of pearls and she carried a bouquet of orchids, lilies-of-the valley and roses. Mrs. James E. Freeman, the matron of honor, wore white and silver lame and an American Beauty tulle hat. She carried red roses. Lieut. Howard T. Scranton served as best man and ushers were Ensign Frank L. Johnson and Lieut. Howard Whittaker.

A reception followed at the Adolphus Hotel and the couple left later for a wedding trip to Houston, Tex. They will make their home at the Argyle Apartments in Dallas.

The bride is a graduate of Hockaday Junior College and is the granddaughter of the late Judge and Mrs. John B. Meserve of Washington. Ensign White received his degree from the University of Kentucky.

Col. Oveta C. Hobby To Be Honored at Tea Tomorrow

Honoring Col. Oveta Culp Hobby and the women officers of the United States Armed Forces, the Women's City Club will entertain at a reception and tea at the club from 4 until 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Among the honor guests will be Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Mrs. James Doolittle, Maj. Ruth Streeter of the Marines and Lieut. Comdr. Dorothy Stratton of the SPARS.

Great enthusiasms has been aroused recently over the idea developed by the Women's City Club, for forming a Service Women's Branch of the club, and Mrs. John T. Lucker, the president of the club, decided that the reception Sunday will be the opening gun of the new program for developing the Service Women's Branch.

Belgian Ambassador To Be Honored at United Nations Fete

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will be guests of honor at the United Nations Club party tomorrow evening. The event will take place in the historic Chauncey Depew home of the Texas Co., 2101 Massachusetts ave.

Also among the notables planning to attend are Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward. Mrs. Woodward will be hostess for the evening, assisted by a group of junior hostesses from the American Women's Voluntary Services.

Dancing, entertainment and light refreshments are planned. Hours are from 7 to 11 p. m.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

A BATTLE-WISE and seasoned veteran of the Pacific campaign returned to his home in Virginia this week.

He is Lieut. Archie DuLaney Simpson, jr., United States Marine Air Corps, who has participated in 34 hazardous missions against the Japs and still looks the picture of the nickname "Happy," he received when he was a star baseball player in Loudoun County.

Lieutenant Simpson is spending a month's leave with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Thomas, and is getting a warm welcome from his many friends throughout northern Virginia. The 23-year-old warrior who was awarded the Air Medal following his bombing missions against Japanese shipping and shore installations, answers all questions asked by his admiring public in a charming manner, but with a natural shyness. There is evident a disinclination to discuss his personal exploits or to give an account of the numerous air battles in which he has engaged. However, the ribbons he wears unmistakably tell the story of his personal heroism in combat.

On one of these ribbons are stars that tell of participation in four major battles. His citation is as follows: "In the name of the President of the United States, the Commander, South Pacific areas and South Pacific Force, takes pleasure in awarding the air medal to Lieut. Archie D. Simpson, USMC, for service as set forth:

" 'For meritorious achievement in aerial fight against the enemy while serving with a Marine scout bombing squadron in the Solomon Islands areas, from November 4 to December 27. . . . His conduct was in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service.' "

Lieutenant Simpson is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archie D. Simpson. He enlisted in the Navy when he was 21 and later was transferred to the Marine Corps.

His face, bronzed by the sun of the Pacific Islands, where he has been on duty, "Happy," is spending most of his leave in lazy relaxation and in walking over the rolling hills of Loudoun County. He took great interest and delight in the annual fall trials of the Loudoun Gun Dog Club, which were held on the estate of his grandparents a few days ago.

Mrs. Ferdinand Edme Chartard 4th of Baltimore, who, with her daughter, little Miss Connie Chartard, have been visiting Mrs. Chartard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Nelson Lyon, at Black Oak Ridge, near Purcellville, for some time, left today for Baltimore to visit her grandmother, Mrs. Robert L. Bentley, at her home, Rokeby, near Pikesville, Md.

Dr. Jack Newell, USN, of Brookline, Mass., who has been on duty in Australia, has arrived in California, where Mrs. Newell will meet him, and they are expected back at Brookline soon, where he will spend his leave. Mrs. Newell was formerly Miss Nancy Dudley of Middleburg.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Seipp and their two daughters, Ellen Seipp and Katrina Seipp, have returned to their home, Brook Hill, near Middleburg, from Maine, where they spent some time at their cottage there.

Mrs. Warren W. Whiteside, jr., and Miss "Tiny" Williams of Front Royal were the recent guests of Col. and Mrs. John C. Butler at their home, Kelvedon Farm, near Rectortown.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 2.2% In September

By S. Oliver Goodman

September sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., advanced 2.2 per cent to $2,749,970, Treasurer W. H. Churchill reported last night. Sales gains of the chain system have tended to narrow in recent months due to the difficulty of replenishing inventories.

Net sales for the first nine months this year aggregated $25,089,473, a gain of $2,165,675, or 9.4 per cent over volume for the corresponding period last year.

Without adjustment for change in number of stores, sales of Peoples Drug Stores by months compared as follows:

	1943.	1942.
January	$2,695,701	$2,458,264
February	2,698,354	2,343,969
March	2,832,430	2,446,954
April	2,871,433	2,499,902
May	2,854,184	2,606,099
June	2,796,578	2,563,752
July	2,867,721	2,630,952
August	2,739,553	2,713,002
September	2,749,920	2,690,891

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Department Store Sales Off

Washington department store sales in the week ended October 2 were 7 per cent less than in the similar week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. For the four weeks ended October 2, local sales showed a gain of 8 per cent over the corresponding 1942 period.

The entire Fifth Reserve District displayed a decrease of 7 per cent in sales for the week and an increase of 9 per cent for the four-week period.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported that department store sales last week were 5 per cent lower than in the corresponding week a year ago.

The board said the sales showed somewhat less than the usual sharp seasonal increase in September following an unusually large volume of sales during July and August.

Four reporting districts showed sales increases last week over a year ago. They were Atlanta and Dallas, each 21 per cent; Kansas City, 8 per cent and San Francisco, 5.

Government Called Victor In AP Ruling

John Henry Lewin, special assistant to the Attorney General, said in a statement yesterday that it was clear the Government had won a "substantial victory on the main point at issue" in the Government's antitrust case against the Associated Press.

A special three-judge Federal Court returned a decision in the case October 6.

The statement by Lewin, who was one of the Government attorneys in the case, follows:

"From a reading of the majority opinioh in the Associated Press case, it is clear that the Government has won a substantial victory on the main point at issue.

"The court held with the Government on all except relatively minor issues. The Government sought primarily the abrogation of those AP by-laws, and their application by the defendants in practice, which excluded qualified newspapers from access to AP news reports simply because they happened to offer business competition locally to existing AP members. This was the heart of the case.

"Under the decision these by-laws are stricken down as in restraint of trade and these practices are enjoined. The individual AP members are now stripped of their power to impose any conditions whatsoever upon the admission of a competitor. Their by-laws, moreover, must contain an affirmative declaration to the effect that the competion offered by the applicant to an existing member shall not be taken into consideration by the AP group in passing upon the application.

"In addition, until this fundamental reform takes place, the exercise of AP's exclusive right to the news gathered by its members provided by the by-laws, and the exercise of its exclusive right to the news of the Canadian press, provided by an international cartel, are likewise enjoined.

"It is particularly gratifying that the Government's contentions seemed so sound to the court as not to require an extended trial.

"The court rejected the defendents' claim that the relief sought by the Government would abridge the freedom of the press. The effect of this decision will be to continue freedom of the press in the true sense."

A Buddhist Monk

Lincoln, Adventurer, Dies in China

By the Associated Press

A Tokyo broadcast said today that Ignatius Timothy Trebitsch Lincoln, one of the twentieth century's most fantastic adventurers, had died Thursday night in Shanghai after an intestinal operation.

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said that Lincoln, who had been reported dead many times previously in his career, had been living in Shanghai for several years as a Buddhist monk under the name of Chao Kung.

Lincoln, born in Hungary about 1870, had been an English member of Parliament, a self-confessed spy, an Anglican preacher, a German press censor and a Buddhist monk. He also was reported to have been active in Afghanistan, where he was arrested, and in the Chinese revolution, and served three years in a British jail on charges of espionage and forgery.

Wrote a Book in N. Y.

He came to New York in 1916 where he wrote a book, "The History of a Spy." He was arrested and extradited to Britain, where he was jailed and his citizenship revoked.

Deported in 1919, he conferred with the ex-Kaiser in Holland and joined the abortive Kapp government in Germany in 1920.

In 1921 he was accused of fraud in Czecho-Slovakia and acquitted of treason and forgery charges in Austria, whence he was expelled.

Lincoln then surreptitiously entered the United States and was arrested in 1922 for illegal entry. Later that year he was reported held in connection with the Fascist political murder of Giacomo Matteotti, Socialist leader in Italy, and British newspapers blamed him for Chinese disorders in 1925.

Became Buddhist Priest

He made a dramatic visit to London in 1926, where his son, a British Army private, was executed for murder. Lincoln arrived after the execution and then went to Amsterdam.

In 1931 he became a Buddhist priest. The next year, with closely shaven head and arrayed in a bright yellow silk robe, he turned up in Berlin as "Chao Kung" (enlightenment of the world).

Two years later, known as the "Abbott Chao Kung," he traveled through Canada, accompanied by six Buddhist nuns and four monks and was received by the Canadian Premier.

Operation Gives 1-Armed Men Partial Use of Artificial Hand

By the Associated Press

New successes with an operation which may speed the rehabilitation of those with arm amputations have been reported by Comdr. Henry H. Kessler of the Navy's Medical Corps Reserve.

The operation, known as a "cineplasty," involves actual linking of the muscles of the stump with an artificial arm in such a way that they control a close approximation of natural hand movements.

The operation involves making "canals" in the remaining muscles of the stump and inserting pegs which are attached to levers operating the artificial arm mechanism. The patient needs only to flex his muscles as he would if he had a whole arm. The levers move with the movement of the muscles—thus controlling the lifting of the artificial arm and the grasping and releasing of the lifeless fingers.

The operation is not new, but Kessler reports on its use in more than 100 cases, and says 50 per cent of those were 'highly successful,' with the patients being enabled to use their artificial arms regularly in such jobs as clerk, lithographer, painter, truck driver, inspector of transmission lines, watchman, bookkeeper, machinist, accountant and stereoptype operator.

Another 23 per cent, he said, enjoy partial use of their appliance.

Possibility of using this means to rehabilitate soldiers and sailors who lose arms in battle was indicated in the commander's description of treatment given a soldier who lost part of his right arm in the Philippines in December, 1941.

The soldier was transferred to an Army hospital in this country in May, 1942. His arm stump was then well healed. Kessler performed a cineplasty and attached an artificial arm.

The soldier has been working as a guard for several months.
